LAST RITES HELD FOR COOLIDGE

Coolidge's Voice on the Air.
Webster Would Buy American.
New York's New Mayor.
Teaching About Wine.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LISTENERS, LAST night, heard the voice of Calvin Coolidge, exact in every tone, reproduced as it was in life, in the address that he made honoring Col. Lindbergh. That voice was sent out by WINS, the Hearst broadcasting agency in New York.

It is not inconceivable, since the radio travels through the ether, that Thomas A. Edison and Calvin Coolidge, renewing acquaintance, far away, heard the voice and speech of the former President "coming through" on a machine created and developed by Edison's genius.

A country that can produce men like Calvin Coolidge and Thomas A. Edison, by the way, should not pay so much attention to a passing depression.

SEVEN BIG "exchanges" in New York, the stock exchange, curb exchange, metal, cotton, raw silk, cocoa, coffee and sugar exchanges, are all closed today, as a tribute to the late Calvin Coolidge.

On the other hand, all stores in Calvin Coolidge's town, Northampton, Mass., will remain open, "because that is what Calvin would have wanted." The Mayor says:

"Now every nickel counts. If business places close, they might lose some sales. And that is exactly what Calvin would not have wanted."

New England knows New England.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS say the death of Calvin Coolidge is "more than the death of an ex-President, it is the death of an era. With him has gone the America that was pre-occupied with its own narrow affairs, relying on simple, old-fashioned creeds."

Let us hope the British papers are mistaken.

THE COOLIDGE era was one of plain Americanism, with a President concentrated on the interests of America and of Americans.

The Coolidge era was one of economy, which he always urged while setting a good example.

An "end of the Coolidge era" would be a very bad thing for the country that elected Coolidge President.

SOMEBODY SAID it was impossible for anybody to be as wise as Daniel Webster LOOKED, but Webster was wise as well as impressive in appearance. For instance, please read the following extract from one of the great American orator's addresses, sent to this office by C. H. Boynton, with the latter's praise for W. R. Hearst's "buy American" campaign:

"Wherever there is work for the hands of men there is work for their teeth. Where there is employment there will be bread. It is a great blessing for the poor to have cheap food, but, greater than that, prior to that, and of still higher value, is the blessing of being able to buy food by honest and respectable employment.

"Employment feeds and clothes and instructs. Employment gives health, sobriety and morals. Constant employment and well-paid labor produces, in a country like ours, general prosperity, content and cheerfulness."

THIS IS printed to impress upon those with money to spend that they should spend it for goods MADE IN AMERICA. Twelve million men lack work in the United States now, and many lack what Daniel Webster called "work for their teeth," which means food.

WEBSTER'S WORDS "where there is employment, there will be bread," should not be forgotten by any American who is spending money. He should make it his business to spend his money for something made by American workers, supplying them work for their hands and "WORK FOR THEIR TEETH."

BUY GOODS MADE BY AMERICAN LABOR IN AMERICA.

JOHN P. O'BRIEN, new Mayor of New York, cuts his own salary $10,000 a year, in spite of the fact that a competent Mayor is the best investment New York could make, regardless of salary.

Senator Borah once refused to accept an increase in salary.

It is said that the citizens of Athens once voted to spend a large sum of money on public defense, instead of dividing it among themselves.

That might happen in any American city now, and it might NOT.

JUDGE EDWIN O. LEWIS, of Philadelphia, says it is "appalling that intoxicating liquors should be placed on sale without the youth of the nation receiving instructions on the use and abuse of alcohol. The use of wines should be taught in the homes."

Unfortunately, the prohibition era, drawing to a close, instructed children thoroughly in the "use and abuse of alcohol," especially the ABUSE of "bathtub" gin, and other alcoholic poisons.

THE ONLY way to teach children "the use of wines" is the French way. Give a child two or three tablespoons full of light red wine in a full glass of water, making a drink less than one-half of one per cent alcoholic. That is the way to forestall drunkenness later.

SENATOR HALE, of Maine, the rock-ribbed prohibition state, tells Mrs. Quimby, head of the Maine W. C. T. U., that

Drys Open Attack on 3.2 Beer

COLLIER BILL SCORED AS ILLEGAL

Senators Hear Foes Of Measure Present Hot Argument

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—An imposing array of dry leaders today assailed the Collier 3.2 per cent beer bill as unconstitutional at hearings held before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The drys opened a six-hour debate, with wet leaders to be heard later in defense of the bill.

Edward B. Dunford, Andrew Wilson and Robert H. McNeill, attorneys for the Anti-Saloon League, presented the drys' legal arguments. They declared the Collier bill would "thwart the Eighteenth Amendment, defeat the purpose of national prohibition, and leave helpless thousands at the mercy of old king alcohol."

DRY FORCES

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman, Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement; Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, chairman, Women's National Democratic Law Enforcement League, and Mrs. William T. Bannerman, representing the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, opposed the bill on the ground it would take from millions of women and chil-

Fugitive To Ask Pardon

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A well-to-do Cleveland businessman who "made good" after escaping from a Colorado prison 14 years ago, today prepared to return to ask a pardon.

The man, known here as Harry Stanley, manager of a music publishing company, but listed on Colorado records as Glenn Smeeman, fugitive from justice, was arrested by Cleveland police yesterday.

His attorney, Frederick Frankel, said he made a long distance telephone call to prison authorities in Colorado last night. Smeeman is to go back without a guard and obviate extradition proceedings.

Police would not discuss the arrest of Smeeman, but the fugitive blamed an unnamed woman who, he said, attempted to blackmail him.

Smeeman's business career here was quiet, but successful. He came to Cleveland on a freight train, police said they were told, after his escape, and found a job with the music publishing house.

His life here was that of a normal business man and recently, he said, he began building a $25,000 suburban home. Three months ago a child was born to his wife.

Colorado prison authorities said last night they did not want Smeeman, but his extradition will be sought in compliance with state law.

Colorado prison records show Smeeman was received October 14, 1917, to serve a sentence of from 36 to 37 months for grand larceny. At no time, Warden Roy Best said, was Smeeman a member of a chain gang.

POLICE SLAY BROTHER OF IRENE

One of Pair Killed in Battle Identified As Tom Crawford

"Tom" Crawford, notorious gunman brother of Irene Shrader, blonde trigger woman executed with her salesman sweetheart, Glenn Dague, has been killed in a police gun battle.

Police of Cape Girardeau, Mo., announced today, according to an Associated Press dispatch, that two gunmen shot to death in a battle with seven police officers here Tuesday had been identified by the national bureau of identification as Thomas Robert Crawford and John Huff.

Huff was arrested at Joplin, November 23, 1931, on a charge of vagrancy and was released. He was again arrested at Texarkana, Ark., February 13, 1932, for vagrancy and released.

Crawford was the third adult member of the desperate trio which shot their way through Pennsylvania into the hills of West Virginia where Irene, just before she died, swore that her brother was buried. He was shot in the battle on the New Castle-Butler road with State Highway Patrolmen Brady Paul and Ernest Moore. Patrolman Paul was killed, Moore wounded slightly. Irene finished the thrilling episode with a graphic description of how she and Dague buried Crawford in

PRESIDENT HOOVER AT SIMPLE SERVICES

High and Low Join in Farewell to Former Chief

By MORRIS WATSON

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—From the seats of the mighty and the dwellings of the poor, American folk today bade a plain farewell to a plain man.

For Calvin Coolidge's last day above the sod from which he rose to fame, the simplicity that he loved was preserved.

Even the arrival of President Hoover and a delegation from Washington was marked by its absence of pomp.

Mr. Coolidge's body was removed from the Coolidge home to the Edwards Congregational Church at 8:10 a. m. There for a time before the funeral services the body lay in state while hundreds of men and women, some accompanied by children, filed past the bier to pay their last respects to the former President.

MANY FLOWERS

The body of Mr. Coolidge lay in a bronze casket amid a profusion of flowers. An armed soldier stood at either end of the bier.

The door closed at 9:30, leaving hundreds disappointed in the street outside.

Then when President Hoover's

FIRE CAPTIVE, 70, RESCUED

An aged man was led to safety by a pedestrian and three other persons were forced from their homes by fire of undetermined origin early today which damaged a barber shop and a dwelling at 1237 and 1239 Franklin street, North Side.

Blinded by the smoke, Joseph Seubert, 70, a barber at 1239 Franklin street, was led through his smoke-filled shop by a passerby who turned in the alarm. Seubert was uninjured. He has been a barber there 55 years.

The fire spread to the dwelling adjoining the barber shop, occupied by Edward J. Conrad, his wife and daughter, Katherine, 13, driving them out. Damage to the barber shop was estimated at $300 and to the dwelling at $100 by Capt. James Hunter.

ROCKNE PLOT STORY HUSHED

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Federal operatives today were reluctant to discuss reports that they have been investigating a theory that a gangland bomb caused the airplane crash in Kansas which cost the lives of Coach Knute Rockne and seven others in 1931.

According to a copyright story published yesterday by the South Bend (Ind.) News-Times, the time bomb was meant to kill the Rev. John Reynolds, a professor at Notre Dame University, a witness in the murder case of Jake Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter. The priest had identified Leo V. Brothers, later convicted and sentenced, as resembling the murderer of Lingle.

It was learned here at the aeronautics branch office of the Department of Commerce that rumors of the bomb plot had been investigated at the Kansas City office. A report of the investigators' findings was forwarded to Washington, it was asserted.

Two Trapped In Cave-in of Coal Bank

SHARON, Pa., Jan. 7.—Two novice miners were believed smothering to death in a cave-in at a coal bank in Brookfield (O.) Township, today as 25 of their fellow workers worked feverishly to dig them out.

The two men, Perry Coxson and Frank Smith, were caught in a cave-in at a recently reopened coal bank this morning. Several others narrowly escaped being trapped.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Jan. 7.—(INS.)—George Tate, confessed "trigger man" in the killing of Bad Isley Tate, his father, today was, expected to be removed to Western Penitentiary to begin a life term.

"Good luck, George," his brother, Sammy, hollered out when deputy sheriffs took Sammy to Huntingdon Reform School yesterday. Sam was sentenced along with George for his father's death.

Girl Leaps Out Window After Dish Barrage

A victim of a second-story window leap which, police said, climaxed a fight with her mother and sister in their home last night, Miss Margaret Delenko, 19, a waitress, of 5 Magee street, was in Mercy Hospital today suffering fractures of the arm and leg and bruises.

Margaret, angered when her sister, Julia, 21, accidentally knocked her purse to the floor, picked up a piece of glassware and struck Julia in the face, cutting her upper lip, according to police. One of the flying dishes of the family's Russian Orthodox Christmas Eve dinner struck Mrs. Barbara Delenko, their mother, in the face.

After the alleged dish hurling act, Margaret attempted to leap from the third-floor bathroom window, but was frustrated by a brother, Harry, 15, who pulled her back, police said. She then ran to the vacant second floor, raised a window and leaped to the street, police reported.

Both sisters are employed in the same uptown restaurant—Margaret during the day and Julia at night.

GIRL MURDER STORY TOLD

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Regaining consciousness for a few moments at Presbyterian Hospital, Dennis Boyle, 30, today gave police their first clue to the men who slugged him senseless and murdered his sweetheart, Ruth McCloskey, 20, after attacking her.

Boyle disclosed that two men drove into secluded Fairmount Park in an automobile and overpowered Boyle and his sweetheart in a secret trysting place near a large tree.

He was unable to identify his attackers and, in the belief that Rose was still alive, refused to tell police she was the girl who accompanied him to the park.

Rose was found beaten to death, her throat slashed and her body bearing evidence of a criminal attack, in Fairmount Park yesterday.

Boylse lapsed into a coma after gasping out his story of the brutal attack. Hospital attaches held small hope for his recovery.

Police began an immediate checkup of Boyle's story in an effort to apprehend the occupants of the automobile.

W. R. Hearst Pays Tribute to Coolidge

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Jan. 6, 1933.

CALVIN COOLIDGE was in my opinion the most typically American President that we have had in many years.

He had the distinguishing characteristics of a New Englander, but he was nation-wide in his understanding of all the people of the United States and in the appeal that his rugged but sympathetic and engaging personality made to them.

In other words, he understood the people of this country, North, South, East and West; and they, regardless of sectionalism, understood him and liked him and trusted him.

They liked his simplicity. They liked his frankness and direct honesty. They liked his patriotism, his Americanism.

They appreciated his genuine interest in their welfare, and his sound and sincere judgment on what was best for their welfare.

They liked his silence. They preferred it immensely to the empty words of the average windy politician.

Calvin Coolidge thought as the people of this country thought.

He understood their needs, he sympathized with their aims. He was one of them.

He had been brought up as one of them, and no matter what success he achieved in life, he never ceased to be one of them.

OLD HOME WAITS FOR COOLIDGE

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—A favorite son was coming home today to rest in eternal sleep with his ancestors in a grave by the side of the road.

Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, having left this pastoral hamlet to make his mark, had accomplished his mission. The man who in his boyhood days rode to town in his father's wagon, was returning to Plymouth.

The earth that he loved had been opened to embrace him. On a terrace of the cemetery, between the graves of his son, Calvin, Jr., and his step-mother, of both of whom he was intensely fond, his last resting place had been made ready.

GARNER DENIES BOLTING ROOSEVELT ON TAX PROGRAM

HIGHER INCOME LEVIES FACE OPPOSITION

Speaker Says He Has Substitute Plan Ready

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Speaker John N. Garner emphatically denied today that he had broken with President-elect Roosevelt and other congressional leaders on a budget balancing tax program.

The Speaker was aroused by reports that he had scuttled the plan suggested at the New York conference between Mr. Roosevelt and congressional leaders to sharply increase income taxes in the lower and intermediate brackets.

At the same time, Garner reiterated his declaration of yesterday that if Congress rebels against this tax, he has in mind a tax to take its place.

Garner, his attention called to statements that he was in disagreement with the President-elect, said:

"There is not a word of truth in it."

OPPOSITION GROWS

The income tax program, however, has aroused so much opposition in the rank and file of Congress that its fate appears to be very uncertain.

Garner said he would like to see the program aproved at the New York conference, including the income tax increases, uassed by the House. He said:

"It was suggested at the conference that to broaden the base of the income tax and to raise rates was the best way of meeting the deficit. Someone said we could get $203,000,000 that way, and there was no objection.

"I would be mighty glad to see 'the lax plan' reported and passed by the House."

Garner explained that the congressional leaders are confronted by a "practical proposition."

ISSUE NOT SETTLED

Although announcement of approval of the income tax plan in New York was conditioned upon necessity, some of the Democratic leaders attending the parley hastened to say that no definite agreement was reached upon new taxes.

The party chieftains still declared their intention of balancing the budget for next year in the present "lame duck" session, and adhered to their announcement that new taxes would be levied only as a last resort.

The party leaders will first make an unprecedented drive for economy with the hope that any tax increase might be avoided.

WAR VETERANS 'SAFE'

Only the World War veterans appeared safe from the economy program. The Democratic chiefs rejected any big cut in veterans' benefits.

Government employes, it seemed, would make a further contribution with their pay cut being raised to 10 per cent.

Leaders were disposed to await action of President Hoover on a beer bill. The measure, estimated to yield from $125,000,000 to $300,000,000 in taxes, will pass the Senate in two weeks, according to Democratic plans. It passed the House December 20.

Roosevelt Upholds Tax Rise Program

By EDWARD L. RODDAN
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Unruffled over reports of opposition in Congress, President-elect Roosevelt today stood behind the Democratic budget balancing program to include special levies on beer and gasoline and higher rates on incomes.

Friends of Roosevelt said the plan originated with the Senators and Representatives, with whom he conferred at his home here, and that he simply acted as mediator in bringing their views together. If changes are to be made, it is up to Congress to work them out.

The reports given out that the boost on income rates would effect only those of limited means was described as erroneous by persons close to Roosevelt.

If the new program is adopted, it was said that the rates on vast incomes will be greater than it is in England, Germany or Italy, amounting in some cases close to 65 per cent.

EAST END MAN ABDUCTED, ROBBED

Girl Victim of Holdup Of Restaurant By Gunman

Overpowered by two bandits as he was about to enter his automobile at the Ruskin apartments, Ruskin avenue, early today, D. J. Thomas of 5762 Ellsworth avenue, was forced to drive the thugs through East Liberty, Bloomfield and the downtown section, according to a police report.

During the 15-mile journey the bandit pair kept him covered with revolvers.

After robbing him of $2 and a watch, the bandits told him to return to the apartments, where they alighted.

A lone robber early today held up Ethel Schultz, waitress in the McDonald restaurant, 304 South St. Clair street, and escaped with $16, the contents of the cash register.

The girl was alone in the restaurant when the armed man entered.

An attempt to rob the M. Rom and Sons Company warehouse at 1207 West Liberty avenue was frustrated early today when a burglar alarm was set off. A squad of police, investigating, found a crow bar on the roof of the building and a hole cut there sufficient to admit a man. Nothing had been taken, however.

James Early, Negro, of 2532 Elba street, reported to police early today that he had been held up by two white men, one of whom was armed, at Washington street and Webster avenue, and robbed of $35.

ORDER TO FIGHT JAPS ASKED BY WAR LORDS

Spread of Conflict In North China Imminent

SHANGHAI, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Spread of an unofficial war between Japan and China in Northern China was regarded in foreign circles today as an imminent possibility.

It was estimated that at least 6,000 Japanese troops now were concentrated at Shanhaikwan, China's northern railway terminal which the Japanese captured early this week and Chinese were reported rushing reinforcements to Chinwangtao, the port on the Yellow Sea, 10 miles westward.

Telegrams were pouring in on the Nationalist government at Nanking from various war lords throughout China asking orders to march against the Japanese. Among these were Tsai Ting-Kai, who commanded the 19th Route Army which defended Shanghai against the Japanese last February.

Chinese leaders here declared they were determined to defend the province of Jehol against the anticipated Japanese drive to bring that territory within the Manchukuo boundary. They said a further Japanese advance either northwestward in that direction from Shanhaikwan or further southward toward Tientsin and Peiping would be resisted. It has become impossible to restrain the Chinese people further, they said, "in the face of the increasing provocation of the Japanese."

All hope that the League of Nations would be able to take effective action in behalf of China apparently has been practically abandoned.

Foes Occupy Opposite Sides of Shi River

PEIPING, Jan. 7.—(INS.)—Only the occasional crack of a rifle or burst of a hand grenade disturbed the Shi River battle front today, where opposing Chinese and Japanese troops have dug in on opposite sides of the stream.

Official reports dispatched by Gen. Ho Chi-Kuo, Chinese commander of the fallen garrison at Shanhaikwan, and advices from American observers said the positions of the armies remained unchanged.

The hostile troops, the reports said, face each other from hillsides across a mile-wide valley.

American investigators deny reports of large Chinese troop movements in the battle area and state there is nothing to indicate the Chinese are massing against a feared Japanese drive.

TAX RISE PLANS HIT FAMILIES

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The family man and woman will carry the burden of the income tax program proposed by President-elect Roosevelt and Democratic Congressional leaders in their New York conference, it was revealed today.

Single persons will pay on the same amount of income for 1933 as for 1932, the single exemption remaining at $1,000.

Married persons will pay on $500 more income, the married exemption being lowered from $2,500 to $2,000.

The lowering of the marital exemption will expand the taxpaying list to millions of modest income families that this year will not be called on to pay on their 1932 earnings, even after the field was broadened by the tax bill adopted last year.

Goff, W. Va. Ex-Senator, Dies

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Death came to former United States Senator Guy D. Goff, of West Virginia, at his winter residence here at 2 a. m. today. He was in his sixty-seventh year.

The Senator, who retired from national life at the end of his term in 1931 because of ill health, was living here with his daughter, the wife of Representative Carroll Reece, of Tennessee, and her daughter.

Goff had a distinguished war record. At the outbreak of the World War he was in the judge advocate general's department of the Army and was a memoer of Gen. Pershing's staff later. He also served with the Army of Occupation on the Rhine.

Goff was ordered back from Europe by President Wilson to become general counsel for the Shipping Board. He was elected to the Senate in 1925.

He was born September 13, 1866, at Clarksburg, W. Va.

While funeral arrangements have not been completed it was announced services would be private and that interment would be in Arlington National Cemetery.

SKLAR DENIED NEW TRIAL

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—S. B. Sklar, of Pittsburgh, manager of a research laboratory, today lost his appeal to the Westmoreland County courts to wipe out a conviction and prison sentence imposed on him here two years ago. Judge C. E. Whitten, in a decision concurred in by the other two judges, dismissed Sklar's petition for a new trial and arrest of judgment.

The petition recited that Sklar was convicted two years ago on a charge of false pretense. The case involved obtaining more than $1,000 from Samuel Miller, local businessman, under the pretext that Sklar was Miller's cousin from Russia. Subsequently Sklar served eight months in jail for the offense, with an additional month for costs.

Barnhouse, a bus driver, was reported making arrangements for his release by paying about $35.

dren the prohibition protection of the federal Constitution.

Mrs. Peabody protested 3.2 per cent beer would be intoxicating to all children and therefore is unconstitutional under the Eighteenth Amendment. She said:

"There are 30,000,000 school children who may be affected by this bill which makes 4 per cent beer available without any restriction of age, such as existed before the Eighteenth Amendment in most states.

"Whether 4 per cent beer is intoxicating to the 'average' man or member of Congress is not to the point. The people represented by you include women and children, representing a two-thirds majority of the people.

"We submit that 4 per cent beer is intoxicating and therefore is unconstitutional under the Eighteenth Amendment. If you declare it to be non-intoxicating then it may be sold anywhere, and no Congress and no state can control it."

'CONFLICT' SEEN

Dunford declared the measure was "in conflict with the spirit and purpose of the Eighteenth Amendment." He called it an "effort to legalize intoxicating beer." He added:

"It is both an attempt to sanction what the first section of the amendment prohibits and also an attempt to defeat or thwart the purpose of the amendment, which the Supreme Court declared Congress could not do and discharge its constitutional obligation.

"The record shows that the legislation is proceeding upon the false premise of seeking to define the maximum amount of alcohol not actually intoxicating, which is something physically, scientifically and practically impossible of enactment since no two individuals are affected alike."

SCORES POINT

Dunford scored a point over the committee by making Senator Blaine (Rep.), of Wisconsin, the chairman, concede that the licensing section of the Collier bill probably was unconstitutional. Blaine at first insisted that in passing the bill, Congress could simply fail to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment against beer containing less than 3.2 per cent of alcohol. Dunford protested:

"Oh, no. It grants a positive license to manufacture beer up to 3.2 per cent. You would make him take out a license. That constitutes the granting of a privilege."

Blaine said:

"Well, we'll take the licensing provision out of the bill.

"If the bill should only require the manufacturers of beer to register, that all who register must pay a tax and then penalize all who fail to register, that wouldn't be constitutional."

Dunford conceded:

"That could be done, but it is not pursuant to the constitution. It's not appropriate legislation."

Overheated Boiler Blamed For Blaze

An overheated boiler was blamed by firemen for a fire in the basement of Victor Silverman, meat dealer, at 1321 Fifth avenue, early today, causing a loss estimated at $200. The fire was confined to the basement.

WIDOW BLOCKS DEATH QUIZ

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Police threatened to subpena the widow of Edwin O. Schildhauer, slain bandmaster, to force her to come out of seclusion as they continued their investigation into the killing today.

The comely, 24-year-old widow's absence from the inquest led to its indefinite postponement yesterday and precipitated clashes between officials and her attorneys.

Later Police Capt. John Stege said Carl Bradberry was being held on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct juictice. Bradberry, a former deputy sheriff, had admitted an affair with Mrs. Schildhauer a short time before her husband's death December 10 but denied killing him, police said.

Again police were balked when Attorney E. H. Kubitz, originally employed by the widow, refused to answer any questions relating to the whereabouts of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carlson, who moved from the Schildhauer apartment building four days before the bandmaster was abducted and slain in gangland fashion.

AUTO SET AFIRE IN JOB FEUD

A truck owned by Charles Tuckey, of 222 Hazel drive, Mt. Lebanon, a painting contractor, was saturated with gasoline and fired at the rear door of the Academy Theater last night.

When firemen arrived the roof of the truck was ablaze. Sawdust on the roof had been saturated with a gasoline, according to Battalion Chief Daniel Jones.

Tuckey, whose firm is spray painting the interior of the theater, renamed "Variety," had been told by union sympathizers Thursday that spray painting was against union rule, according to Jones.

Bride Loses Husband And Hope of Legacy

MRS. EDITH NEWCOMER

Youth Killed With $10,000 Bequest Soon Due

Death today had taken a young bride's husband and a $10,000 legacy believed to have been coming to him within the next few months. Mrs. Edith Johnson Newcomer, 21, of Coulter, Pa., has left for Dixon, Ill., to meet the body of her husband, Franklin Newcomer, 21, killed Thursday on a Baltimore and Ohio freight train at Cumberland, Md.

Only three months ago the young couple was married at Dixon, Johnson's former home, where the funeral and burial take place.

Riding the top of a freight car on his return from a futile job hunt in Cumberland, Md., the husband was struck down by a low bridge. He was traveling with a companion, Howard Miller, 19, also of Coulter.

Mrs. Newcomer said she understood her husband would have received $10,000 from the estate of his parents if he had lived to be 22.

he favors changing the prohibition amendment, because if that is not done the next Congress would probably vote no money for enforcement, which would nullify prohibition entirely.

Senator Hale voted for prohibition and the Volstead law, but says that if prohibitionists do not consent to a modification of the Volstead law the whole amendment will be repealed at the next session.

GOV. ROOSEVELT is said to have agreed on increases in income tax charges that will "balance the budget." Taxes on little incomes are to be increased 4 to 6 per cent on $4,000, 8 to 12 per cent on higher incomes.

This, of course, will not balance the budget, but will produce less gross revenue than the present arrangement.

What is more serious, it will unsettle business, disturb plans that might result in employment.

MEN, UNFORTUNATELY, are not entirely altruistic. If you say to them: "We are planning to take all you make, in case you make anything." They will say:

"Then we may as well not MAKE anything or UNDERTAKE anything.'

And when those that have money don't undertake anything, employment lags.

One sad part of our system of government, which is the best in the world, perhaps, but not perfect, is the fact that we change it every little while, compelling the new one to make the same old mistakes all over again.

MRS. COOLIDGE LONELY FOR FRIENDS IN 'CASTE' ISOLATION

HIGH AND LOW AT COOLIDGE FUNERAL

party had arrived at the church, the brief and simple funeral services were held.

On the 13-car special train bearing President Hoover was one of the largest gatherings of national leaders to participate in such a sorrowful mission in recent years. Included were Vice President Curtis, heading a delegation from the Senate; Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Secretaries Stimson, Adams and Chapin, Justice Stone, of the Supreme Court; Harry S. New, Postmaster General in the Coolidge administration; Senator James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor under Coolidge; Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Senator David A. Reed.

HONORARY PALLBEARERS

Six policemen of the Northampton police department were chosen for active pallbearers at the funeral, while the honorary bearers were all old friends of the dead President. They were William F. Whiting, of Holyoke, former secretary of commerce; Frank W. Stearns, Boston business man, who was the former President's closest adviser; Clifford H. Lyman, Northampton book dealer; Judge Thomas J. Hammond, of the Superior Court; Reuben B. Hills, manufacturer; Walter L. Stevens, of Northampton, attorney; R. W. Hemenway, former law partner of Mr. Coolidge's; William M. Butler, former United States Senator; Homer C. Bliss, Mayor of Northampton; John H. Trumbull, former Governor of Connecticut, and Charles E. Andrews, treasurer of Amherst College.

The body of Mr. Coolidge lay last night in the comfortable living room of "The Beeches," the Coolidge home since his retirement from the Presidency. A Greyish bronze casket with white satin lining rested upon standards in front of a fireplace at the east end of the room. Across the top was etched:

"Calvin Coolidge.

The former President was dressed in morning clothes, striped trousers, wing collar, four-in-hand tie with light white stripe. On the third finger of his left hand, folded over his right, was a black intaglio ring.

His head inclined slightly to the right. The expression was untroubled, serene. Glass covered the opened portion of the casket.

Newsboys Pay Tribute To Friend, Coolidge

CROWDS BLOCK HOOVER

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—President Hoover and an official party had to literally battle their way into Edwards Congregational Church today to attend the funeral of Former President Calvin Coolidge.

Thousands of persons were masesd outside the edifice, and police and firemen were called to clear the way for the President's automobile.

Recall President's Praises of the 'Profession'

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Modestly reposing among the floral tributes from the world's great which graced the bier of Calvin Coolidge at his Northampton home last night was one from a group of Boston boys who held the former President in great respect—newsboys of the Burroughs Foundation.

Never forgetful of kindnesses shown to those within their ranks, the newsboys of Boston had ample reason for calling Calvin Coolidge their friend.

In 1921, when as vice president of the United States, Mr. Coolidge was invited to attend the dedication of a tablet in memory of Albert E. Scott, a newsboy hero who died for his country in France, he accompanied his regrets at being unable to attend with a remarkable tribute to the newsboys. He wrote:

"Newsboys go everywhere, see everything and know everybody. There is no experience in which they do not have a part, and no life which they do not live. They are Americans. To their spirit, to their enterprise, to their courage, to their devotion, it is altogether fitting that a memorial should be erected bearing the name of one of their number who has become immortal."

In addition to his words of regard, Mr. Coolidge ordered two Navy destroyers placed at the disposal of a newsboys' organization to convey a large boys' band from New York to Boston for the exercises.

And so the newsboys sent a humble symbol of respect and love to one, who like the youthful newsboy "Scotty," has joined the immortals.

A delegation of three newsboys from the Northampton Gazette delivered the floral piece to the Coolidge home.

Former Neighbor Lauds Coolidge Simplicity

FRANKLIN, Pa., Jan. 7.—Walter H. O'Brien, who lived next door to Calvin Coolidge in Northampton when Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts, visited Franklin on business yesterday. He said:

"Simplicity was dominant in everything Mr. Coolidge did. When he returned to Northampton after retiring from the White House he insisted that no change be made in his law office, that no new furniture be bought. Probably they would not have purchased The Beeches had it not been for Mrs. Coolidge's desire for a large home in which to entertain.

"Their wants were modest, they lived plainly. Northampton regarded Coolidge as a kindly neighbor and friend."

Order of Coolidge Funeral Service

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Following is the order of the funeral service which was conducted today for Calvin Coolidge:

Organ—Selection from "New World" Symphony, by Dvorak.

Invocation by the Rev. Albert J. Penner, pastor: "Almighty God, Who art our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble, grant us Thy light to shine through the shadows of this hour. Comfort the hearts that are heavy with sorrow, and have compassion upon our weakness. Give us the vision of the eternal reality, and solace us with the hope of larger life beyond, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

Quartet—"Lead Kindly Light."

Scripture—Forty-sixth Psalm, One Hundred and Twenty-first Psalm, Romans 8, II Corinthians 5, John 14.

Nation Stricken

Prayer—"Almighty God, Our Heavenly Father, at this moment a whole nation stricken with grief bows before Thee. We are made to realize again the frailty and transitoriness of our life here upon earth, and our constant need of Thee, who art the Eternal Rock of Ages. We thank Thee, O God, that we can cling to Thee, and that amid all the change and decay which all around we see, Thou never changest.

"But it is not alone a grief-stricken nation which bows before Thee—it is a thankful nation as well. We thank Thee for the life of him whose death we now mourn. We thank Thee for what his life has meant to the country and to the world.

"We thank Thee for the exemplary devotion which he showed in the discharge of all his public duties. We thank Thee for the faithfulness with which he served his town. We thank Thee for the measure of dedication which he brought to the service of the commonwealth, and above all do we bless Thee for the consecration with which he served his country in the highest office within the gift of the people. He kept the faith which the people placed in him.

"We know he is not dead, for with Thee there is no death. And now we pray that Thou wouldst make his memory to be a bright and shining light upon the untried way that we have still to walk, and upon the unknown path that our nation has still to go. May we share his devotion, his consecration, his deep humility in a profound faith in thee. Raise up, O Lord, in our day, new leaders who follow in his steps.

Darkness of Sorrow

"O, Father of Infinite Compassion, God of All Comfort, reveal Thyself to those who have especially been brought into the darkness of sorrow; to those who knew him best and loved him most. Strengthen the hearts that faint under the heavy burden, and support them in the arms of Thine infinite love. May they know that in all their distress Thou dost care for them with unfailing tenderness. Help them to bear with patience their affliction, and to look with glad confidence toward that future where God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

"May we not begrudge him, whose loss we so deeply mourn, the rest with Thee which he has so richly deserved, knowing that by Thy mercy and grace he finished his course, having kept the faith. We ask this for the sake of Thy Son, Our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen."

Quartet—"O, Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go."

Benediction—"Unto God's gracious mercy and protection we commit you. The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make His face to shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up His Countenance upon you, and give you peace, both now and forevermore. Amen."

Coolidge Voice Heard Once More on Radio

Recording of Tribute To Lindbergh Broadcast

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(Universal.)—Over the airways last night came the voice of Calvin Coolidge, addressing "My fellow countrymen" and paying tribute to another great American.

It was an electrical recording of the address Coolidge, as President, made in Washington, June 11, 1927, when he bestowed the Distinguished Flying Cross on Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and station WINS, New York, gave Coolidge's "fellow countrymen" the first posthumous broadcast of a President's speech.

Five and a half years ago when Coolidge welcomed Lindbergh home to the United States after his flight to Paris, the President's greeting and eulogy was carried over the national airways. Last night came their echo after death.

Radio listeners again heard the clipped phrases of their former President, spoken with their familiar New England twang. They heard the President trace the history of American aviation, describe Lindbergh's early career, his rising to the rank of captain in the Officers' Reserve Corps, his high War Department record, and his remarks on the now famous trans-Atlantic flight.

Speaking from Washington over WINS, Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, Secretary of Labor in the Coolidge cabinet, recalled his associations with his chieftain. He said:

"President Coolidge was a man of few words. But he was also a man of prompt decision and action.

"Probably no president ever stood more firmly against intervention in foreign affairs. I remember his question to me while we were discussing the subject. He asked:

"'Why should we take it upon ourselves to entangle the United States in foreign affairs when such men as Washington, Adams, Jefferson and others before us, boasting real minds, saw great dangers in doing so?'"

HINT COOLIDGE DIED INTESTATE

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The possibility that Calvin Coolidge died without making a will, was disclosed today by business associates of the former President.

Ralph W. Hemenway, Northampton lawyer and former partner of Mr. Coolidge, said that no will had been drawn so far as he knew and that he did not believe members of Mr. Coolidge's family knew of the existence of any such document.

Harry Ross, secretary to Mr. Coolidge, said the matter of a will never had been discussed with him.

If Mr. Coolidge died intestate, he would leave two heirs, his widow, Mrs. Grace Coolidge, and his only surviving son, John. His only other near relatives were an aunt, Miss Sarah Pollard, of Proctorville, Vt., now approaching 100 years of age, and an uncle, Hiram Moor, 85, a rice planter, of Welsh, La., who was a brother of Mr. Coolidge's mother.

Death Recorded By Alumni Group

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—St. Johnsbury Academy Alumni Association yesterday recorded the first death among graduates who received diplomas last June.

It was that of Calvin Coolidge, who took a post-graduate course at the school in 1890-1891, and who was belatedly awarded a diploma at the last commencement exercises.

Coolidge Service Held at Amherst

AMHERST, Mass., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Amherst College suspended all classes today out of respect to the memory of Calvin Coolidge, an alumnus and trustee of the college.

A special chapel service was held with trustees, faculty and undergraduates in attendance.

NEIGHBORS FEAR BARRIER OF FAME

Ex-President's Widow Unable to Restore Old Relations

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—The circle of Grace Coolidge's loneliness tightened around her today as her former companion in isolation was laid to rest.

Now she will be set apart from her fellow townsfolk with no one to share that sense of "difference" against which both she and Mr. Coolidge protested in vain.

Unless death breaks down at last the barrier of exaggerated respect that cut friendly Grace Coolidge off from the intimacy of her friends after her return from Washington.

She came back home, after her seven years in the White House, eager to be "plain woman" again, as Mr. Coolidge was anxious to become "an everyday citizen." They wanted to enter into the life of the community they came from.

But, in spite of their graciousness, their friendliness, their simplicity of manner, the old comrades could not forget they were a former President of the United States and first lady. Women who used to drop in on Grace Coolidge to pass the time of day thought they would be considered intruders, doing the same with the now-famous Mrs. Coolidge.

There were some old friends, of course, who continued their associations with her, unchanged. Chief among them Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Hills. Mrs. Hills has been Mrs. Coolidge's constant companion in affliction. But others confided this morning, as they gathered at the church to pay their respects to the Coolidges in comparative anonymity that they had wanted to call on Mrs. Coolidge at her home to offer condolences, but stayed away out of embarrassment.

Classmate Honors Coolidge Memory

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Jan. 7.—Attorney Richard F. Dana, who graduated from Amherst College in 1895 with former President Calvin Coolidge and was his personal friend, paid tribute to him today, saying:

"Calvin Coolidge was not the most brilliant student in the class. He did not go in for athletics, nor did he shine as a social light. He was marked by the one quality which stayed with him during his entire life, his genuine sincerity."

OLD GOLD AIDS CHURCH FUND

Church funds raised by old gold today is the latest drive method being conducted with members of the Woman's Aid Society of the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg.

The first collection was taken at a luncheon yesterday. Old nicknacks, broken spectacles, odd cuff links, watches long since of timekeeping value, crooked, bent pins that once adorned the Sunday go-to-church dress and many other oddities made up the pile. Even broken parts of old false teeth, which incidentally have real refining value, were brought to the church. The collection will be continued to raise funds towards paying off a $11,000 church debt.

MASS MEETING OF CHURCHES

A mass meeting of all North Side churches will be held in the First Christian Church, Arch street, at 7:45 p. m. tomorrow. It will mark the culmination of a program, conducted the past week by the National Reform Association of Pittsburgh.

The rally tomorrow night is one of a series of meetings sponsored by the temperance campaign committee of Allegheny County, of which the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr is chairman for the North Side group of churches.

Carrick Minister To Start Series

Mr. Pankey.

"The Twelve Disciples of Jesus" will be the general theme of a series of Sunday evening sermons to be preached by the Rev. William R. Pankey, of the Union Baptist Church, Brownsville and Hornaday roads, Carrick, beginning tomorrow evening with "Peter, the Roaring Volcano."

STOKOWSKI Philadelphia Orchestra Concert Tonight ON THE AIR

'Dance of Virgins' on WCAE Ethel Shutta and Olsen Open New Program

A dramatization from "Dance of the Virgins," new American Weekly serial story, the premiere of George Olsen's new weekly variety show featuring Gus Van, and concerts by the Philadelphia and San Francisco Symphony Orchestras are highlights of tonight's radio bill.

The dramatic presentation, taken from the opening chapters of a thrilling story of the Orient which starts in tomorrow's American Weekly, is offered by WCAE at 7 p. m. as one of the recently-inaugurated series of broadcasts sponsored throughout the country by 17 Hearst newspapers, including the Sun-Telegraph. The American Weekly is distributed each Sunday with the Sun-Telegraph.

Miss Shutta

Olsen, presenting a one-hour period of popular music, novelty songs and comedy, opens the new Oldsmobile series over a coast-to-coast NBC network including WCAE at 9 o'clock with Ethel Shutta, Fran Frey and Richard "Hotcha" Gardner as soloists in addition to Van. Following the initial program, the broadcasts will be heard each Saturday from 9:30 to 10.

Miss Rice

The Philadelphia Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, playing its annual all-request program, is heard over WJAS during a one and three-quarter-hour broadcast from the Academy of Music in Philadelphia beginning at 8:15 p. m. Included are Franck's Symphony in D minor and and Symphony No. 1 in C minor, by Brahms.

The San Francisco Symphony, with Bernardino Molinari as guest conductor, is heard over WCAE at 11:30 p. m.

Program Pointers

Gladys Rice and Robert Halliday sing selections from "My Maryland," "Naughty Cinderella" and "Desert Song" at 10 over WCAE. The "Magic Carpet" rhythms are provided by Al Goodman and his orchestra . . . Kyle Creighton, Gorham B. Munson and Benjamin Stolberg chat about "low-brows" and "highbrows," revealing pent-up desires, as guest speakers on the first of the new "America's Grub Street Speaks" programs on WJAS at 6.

Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, is heard over KDKA at 10:30, during a broadcast of the annual dinner of the Sojourners Club, a Masonic organization of Army and Navy men.

"The Magic Voice," usually scheduled at 8:15, moves to a 7:45 spot on WJAS for tonight only due to the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra program.

Striking contrasting notes, Archer Gibson features the traditional old Scotch "Charlie Is My Darling," the Cathedral Processional from Wagner's "Lohengrin" and "Largo," from Handel's "Xerxes" during the WCAE-at-8 Echoes of the Palisades.

"Taxing Misfortune" is the topic of an address by F. Robertson Jones, general manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives, at 8 on KDKA.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the House of Representatives of the Philippine Legislature, is interviewed by Frederic William Wile on Philippine independence over WJAS at 10:15.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Just a little competition to Bob Ripley from Globe-Trotter James Circa, of Brookline. His brindle bull dog has adopted two tiny kittens and is mothering them as her own.

Dear G. R. Anderson, Clairton—Received your letter telling about your four-ounce egg measuring seven and seven-eighths inches in circumference. Also the egg, scrambled.

Mrs. Eli Moore, Barnesville, O.—Swell.

J. M. Ivhovich, Homestead—You bet I was.

Maryjane, Bellevue — Okay and thanks.

Helen Louise Dockery, Swissvale—It's right this time, yes?

J. A. Petrencs, Pittsburgh—Many exhaustive treatises on legend and superstition at the Carnegie Library.

* * *

Finally I got the story, but at first I was floored when an excited voice came tripping over the 'phone wire, "You know how it feels to become a grandmother at 34?" She didn't mean me at all but was jubilant about Mrs. Sara A. Lyle, of 912 Talbot avenue, Braddock, who moved into the grandmother class at the ripe old age of 34 yesterday.

Jeannette, Pa., claims the genuine New Years baby. Promptly at the stroke of 12 he arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Ryan. The newcomer definitely settles the gender of the baby whose likeness we see along with the Old Man with the scythe.

Eleven-year-old Jack Feick, of Perryopolis, is lonesome already and he has to spend at least three more months in the Charleroi-Monnessen Hospital at Lock No. 4, Pa., Sled riding accident. He will be glad to hear from any of the boys.

Searched the files, Mrs. Richardson, and our paper didn't print a story about former President Buchanan's wife receiving a pension from the government. You and I know that Pennsylvania's only contribution to the White House was a bachelor.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

O. Henry's story, "Gift of the Magi," was re-enacted twice this Christmas by NBC artists . . . May Singhi Breen and her husband, Peter de Rose, gave each other radio sets and as a result had two where there was none before . . . and then each slipped out and exchanged the sets for something else. They still have no radio . . . Katherine Renwick, the actress, and her announcer-husband, John Holbrook, haven't exchanged theirs as yet, so have two of those attachable microphones, the type that can be hooked to the home radio receiver, around the house.

Miss Renwick

Alice Ross, 22-year-old contralto, of Oakhurst, N. J., is the most recent winner of Whiteman's weekly auditions at NBC's Times Square studios.

George Burns and Gracie Allen are all set to dumb-crack their way through "International House" and "College Humor," two feature-length motion pictures.

The Boswells are starting off 1933 with a two-week absence from the air waves. They're busy making four vaudeville appearances a day in New York and will inaugurate a new broadcasting schedule January 18.

George Hall carries a pair of baby shoes he found in an attic at home every place he goes . . . Even when he's on the stage in a tuxedo, his pockets bulge with shoes . . . Other prized possessions, which he would never be without, are a tiny fiddle his father gave him when he was 6 and a toy movie machine, a present from an aunt on his seventh Christmas.

Frank Black studied to be a chemist but hasn't been inside a laboratory for 15 years . . .

One of radio's toughest assignments falls to the Don Hall trio. They get up at 5 a. m. to reach the WEAF studios at 6 a. m.—and then rehearse for an hour and a half to get their voices in condition for a 7:30 a. m. broadcast.

GAL-WHIPPED SEAS DWARFING THE GIANT BREMEN . . . TWO DAYS LATE ON HER CROSSING

Borah Boy Who Can Always Find A Burning Deck

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Senator Borah is the boy on the eternally burning deck who fans the flames with his hat.

He is at his best when his feet are blistered from the hot campaign planks. He loves an argument and considers himself evenly matched when everybody else is on the other side.

That's why the old Idaho potato takes the floor against the Senate repeal bill. He is for his rebuttals, right or wrong, and is willing to mix 'em.

The original boy on the blazing deck didn't write the poetry about the affair. Neither did he set fire to the boat. But the flames that lit the battle wreck made a perfect spotlight.

That's where William E. will be as he bellows a dusty blast from a lifelong vacuum. He is against the demons of rum, the imps of beer and the pixies of wine.

Singlehanded, Borah will either defeat the bill or he will have himself appointed guardian for the state legislatures until they grow up.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TALKS 'BABIES'

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, last night cautioned parents that:

"Babies should not be disturbed when they are asleep, even to please grandmothers or aunts or friends."

In a talk on "Bringing Up Babies," she said:

"We should recognize that a baby has as much right to his life—even though he may for the time be only a healthy little animal—as we have to ours.

"In the first year of a baby's life he learns more than in many, many years thereafter. You must be well-disciplined if you expect your baby to be. You must not lose your temper if your baby is to be good-tempered and placid.

"There is much truth in some of the time-worn jokes. In very truth, a child does bring up not only his father, but his mother, too."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You got to hand it to Iowa for the best news today. Some "bird" tried to bid in a farm on a forced sale at less than the mortgage, and came pretty near landing hanging under a giant oak. We hope the days of the old town skinflint sitting back with some ready money to buy in the widow's home is about over.

Will Rogers

Did you read where some senator from Colorado was giving up his seat to his successor right away? He figured that the folks elected the other fellow and he was the one they wanted in there. That's almost unheard of in political life. There is a "lame duck" that should have a statue.

Yours, WILL.

'BUY AMERICAN,' NORTH SIDE GROUP URGES

While members of the North Side Chamber of Commerce unanimously indorsed the "Buy American" campaign and urged citizens of the community to buy American-made goods, other communities in Allegheny County were initiating "Buy American" rallies and meetings for next week.

The resolution passed in the North Side organization was presented by President Frank E. Tencate, North Side electrical goods merchant.

Next Wednesday, members of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side will gather at noon in St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, East street, to hear the Pittsburgh director of the "Buy American" campaign. Julius Schmidt is president.

New Kensington's Kiwanis Club has invited all the manufacturers and business men of the district to attend a luncheon next Thursday in New Kensington to sponsor the same program, while Thursday night in Tarentum High School, the Tarentum Borough Taxpayers' Co-operative League will hold a "Buy American" rally. Invited are those interested in "Buying American" and municipal tax reduction, from Tarentum, Breckenridge, Harrison, Frazier, Fawn and East Deer township. H. M. Britten, president of the league, will preside.

TOWNSHIPS AID

Many townships and boroughs are acting through their councils to lead the program of urging buying of American-made goods so that orders may again open the factories in America.

Verona Councilmen approved unanimously a resolution submitted by Secretary R. C. Simpson, while Murrhall also passed a resolution presented by Secretary S. Y. Woodward. These and other communities are uniting, with veteran organizations and similar groups, to interest their communities in American-made goods.

SENATE PROBE ASKED

A resolution has been submitted by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi Democrat whip, asking the Senate to investigate the flooding of the American market with cheap foreign goods. It was considered to have the approval of the Senate in advance.

From the farmers came a voice protesting the flooding of the American market, with H. G. Keeney, vice president of the National Farmers' Union, urging that every American support the "Buy American" movement.

Leon J. Kost, noted Washington hotelman, suggested that Americans "Eat American," while Miss Ida Taylor, president of the Century Theater Club, encouraged the movement, and is working to gain American support for American actors and actresses.

At lunch time yesterday a group of social leaders could be found at the Twentieth Century Club. The attraction? Sir Frederick and charming Lady Whyte.

After Sir Frederick's lecture before the Friday Morning Club yesterday, they went to the Twentieth Century Club for the luncheon given for the visitors with Mrs. George S. Oliver as hostess.

Among those I recall seeing were Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, Mrs. Frank A. Bond, Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, here in the interest of the Frontier Nursing Association; Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, Mrs. Nathaniel Spear, Mrs. William Larimer Mellon, Mrs. John O. Miller, Mrs. Francis J. Torrance, Miss Isabel Chalfant and Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard.

And Sir Frederick and Lady Whyte were guests of honor, too, at a small dinner, given last night by the R. Templeton Smiths in their home.

At a beautifully appointed ceremony Sunday evening, January 1, at 8 o'clock, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Engelberg, of Elgin avenue, their daughter, Miss Sarah Engelberg, became the bride of David E. Parnes.

The ceremony took place under a canopy of lilies and white roses, with Rabbi M. A. Levin, Rabbi Wolf Leiter, Rabbi E. A. Lichter and Rabbi H. Hausman officiating.

The bride wore a gown of eggshell satin having a full court train and a veil of tulle. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies. She was attended by her sister, Miss Isabelle Engelberg, and Harry Rogow was the best man.

There was a reception for 150 guests, after which Mr. and Mrs. Parnes left on an extended eastern trip. After January 15 they will

Mrs. Breckinridge Speaks On Nurse Service Cruise

That dynamic little woman, Mary Breckinridge, who, after the death of her own two children became a midwife and a nurse that she might take medical care to the last of her country's frontiers—the Kentucky mountains—was in town yesterday. Mrs. Breckinridge came here to address a meeting of the Frontier Nursing Service, which has a local committee headed by Mrs. Charles S. Shoemaker. She came, not to tell her audience of the marvelous humanitarian work being done by her 30 nurses who have to be expert horsewomen in addition to everything else, nor of the broken back she received while on duty and by reason of which she still wears a brace, but to talk of the Belgenland's 15-day cruise which is to benefit the Nursing Service.

The cruise is to be on a charter basis, but bookings are done through the regular agents. The steamer leaving February 25 will go to Jamaica for two days, to the Dutch West Indies, Venezuela, up into the Andes and then to Panama.

To those of her audience, eager to hear more of the thrilling experiences of the Frontier Service nurses after the meeting in the Twentieth Century Club, Mrs. Breckenridge said they serve 9,000 persons over 700 square miles and they "average 400 babies a year." Hearing of the hardships and perils of the life, one wonders just why any woman should seek these nursing positions, yet there is a waiting list of 150 nurses. And a waiting list, too, of the young women who come from all walks of life to be couriers for six weeks or two months at a time. They, too, must be skilled horsewomen and are expected to groom and feed their own horses and the horses of guests as well.

The service is recreating a new breed of children, mothers are learning how to feed them properly although life goes on in the mountains much as if it were still the Eighteenth Century. The people reckon money in shillings, the magnetic little director says.

Women of 27th Ward To Install Officers

'Changing World' Discussed by Epoch Club

Several particularly fascinating sub-topics to the general theme, "The Changing World," were considered Thursday at the meeting of the Epoch Club in Mrs. Charles Orchard's home, Hobart street. Discussing "Revolution in Morals and Manners," Mrs. Edward E. Phelps had a witty paper on "The Vanishing Puritan and the Freudian Gospel;" Mrs. Truman P. Gaylord gave a cheerful outlook on "The Revolt of Modern Youth" (she says it is change and not revolt), and Mrs. C. Calvin Burgess furnished many amusing recollections in her paper on "Fads, Fashions and Follies."

The new program committee was appointed by the president, Mrs. Philip N. Harrison. It consists of Mrs. Gaylord as chairman, Mrs. Henry D. James and Mrs. J. Howard Johnson.

Knoxville Library Club Benefit to Aid Blind

Sir Frederick Whyte Talks On Manchuria at Friday Club

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Japan is said to walk on the legs of American women, Sir Frederick Whyte told the Friday Morning Club yesterday, and added that to stop buying raw silk would have a definite and drastic effect on Japan's economic situation. Sir Frederick, in discussing "Manchuria—Land of Opportunity," sketched the background of China and Japan, saying the latter country, looking abroad for the reason for the success of western nations in Asia, had in 1868 taken Prussia as her model. In England and America, he said, Japan found Christianity was preached but not practiced, and therefore concluded it could not be religion that brought success.

When Prussian militarism lay in pieces after the World War, the civilian party in Japan came into power, but now that party is being held responsible for economic conditions and the militarists again have the upper hand.

The Sino-Japanese question, he said, is not merely a question of who has the right to Manchuria; it presents a problem for the whole civilized world—the question of whether the ideals of the English-speaking nations, the system of conciliation and arbitration that has been set up, is to be maintained—whether there is to be a successful rival for war.

Sir Frederick and Lady Whyte left Pittsburgh last night on their way to California. They spent Wednesday with the Roosevelt family at Hyde Park, Sir Frederick conferring the greater part of the day with the President-elect.

PARIS COLLECTION'S FEATURE POPULAR NAVY BLUE COSTUMES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Paris is wearing navy blue again. Smart young French women go to tea at the Ritz, or dine at the Cremaillere in dresses of navy blue crepe topped with coats of blue broadcloth. Mainbocher's tailored wool suit, with the immense collar of navy-blue-dyed fox, is one of the smartest daytime costumes in town. Straight sheaths of navy blue satin fall in glistening lines over the natural curves of the figure, fashion dinner dresses and backless evening gowns—some sashed with red or bright coral pink.

* * *

WORTH, EVER an ally of navy blue as the smartest color for both sports and town wear, has lots of navy blue in his new collection. He uses it in every imaginable material, from cotton to chiffon, and combined it with white, pale yellow or beige.

* * *

ONE OF his successful afternoon dresses is pictured—a semi-formal gown of navy blue velvet, in one of its striped versions. At the belt, the sheer background of the stripes is cut away, in drawn-work effect, leaving diagonal stripes of velvet against a background of white crepe de chine that is the belt's foundation. White also edges the zig-zag neckline.

* * *

NAVY BLUE broadcloth is combined with pale, fluffy gray fox, for an afternoon coat. The Maison Max, which sponsors this new coat, leaves the slim straight up-and-down lines of the coat unbelted, and makes the cuffs almost as large as the collar.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Lesson in Love for a Young Man

There is in love a something which demands
The light of sun, the breath of windy air;
It must be offered swiftly, with proud hands:
"Behold, I am most beautiful and fair!"
The heady tumult in the eager heart
Cannot be stilled or muted over-long;
There is an hour when love must go apart
To tell its splendor in ecstatic song.

Here is the hand, a-quiver with delight;
The tell-tale mouth which can withhold no kiss;
The heart-beat—louder in the silent night...
Love has no other course to run than this.

This is the wisdom I am surest of:
What can be hidden—is no kin to love.

Hehehch

A radio comic thefted his gags from various newspaper columns and was getting away with it until someone pointed out that fact to his sponsor. The comic was called on the carpet and warned to stop his pirating.

A few of his enemies were later grinning about his plight and humiliation.

"Oh, well," said one rival, "I'm glad he didn't lose his job. He musta been born with a silver spoon in his mouth."

"Silver spoon?" barked Jules Levine, "you mean a silver scissors!"

Clever

Clever contributor Al Klein submits it this way:

"France Decides to Pay Debt to U. S."

"O. K. Amiracle!"

Sounds Like Her

Tom Van Dycke says that Alison Skipworth, the veteran actress, was marking time on the Paramount set the other day with a far-away look in her orbs. A comrade player ankled up to her and said:

"What's the matter, Skippy?"

To which the Grand Old Gal replied:

"Somewhere on the earth there's a matinee going on this afternoon—and I'm not in it!"

Snapper

R. Emmett McKearin overheard this repartee near Forty-seventh and Broadway. He assumes they were vaudeville actors, whatever they are!

"Say," chirped the first layoff, "didn't I panic 'em at Peckskill in 1928?"

"Yeah," was the stifler, "that's why talkies were born!"

Pepigram

Jesse Crawford, the organist, thinks that the word "hades" will survive so long as poets sing of ladies, for which hades is the only rhyme.

That reminds us of Keith Preston's classic crack, to wit:

"You can't praise ladies without hades—anymore than you can raise Hades without ladies!"

Nifty

And Leo Reisman, another of the tempo titans, has discovered that too many men have discovered that "being let in on a deal" is too much like being taken in on one!

Character

Most of New York's night lifers knew and liked old Charlie, the veteran waiter at Reuben's, who died last week. He was, for want of a better word, a "character." Night after night he served the town's rounders high and low, and he greeted them all by their first names, usually adding a little advice, such as: "Mary, you don't look so good, eat more fruit," or "John, you ain't gettin' the sleep you should," or some similar bit of counsel.

His favorite recipe for good health was a baked apple with cream, and he prescribed it to all his customers, frequently bringing it to some wealthy man or woman who had ordered something fancy in the way of pastry or cake. He made them take it, and sometimes stood over them while they ate it, delivering sage advice about clean living and proper diet.

But, as we said, Charlie left us last week. It appears that he arose one morning, in the very pink of condition, and ate a hearty meal, topping it off with nothing else but a baked apple covered with cream. He died in 15 minutes of acute indigestion.

Add Sillies

And Max Gendel offers a sentence containing the word "antique" like this:

"Antique ay go home, now."

Elementary Lesson

I like to wear my finger nails
Quite long, and paint them red!
But he made me like other frails,
And more refined, he said.
He made of me what he desired,
And bound me with love's fetter;
I understand why he grew tired—
The next time—I'll know better!

—Sis Willner.

Gag

A Hoosier humorist offers the one about old Cy, a silent, somewhat irascible tiller of the soil. On such occasions as Christmas he had been known to unbend to the extent of saying "hello" to his neighbors.

Not long ago, it appears, his daughter ran off with the hired man. A neighbor, fully aware of Cy's dislike for conversation, thought nevertheless that in such an exigency he should try to console the old gent.

Strolling over to Cy's farm, the neighbor said: "Hello," but was greeted with silence. The neighbor made another attempt.

"Cy," he said, "I understand your daughter ran off with your hired man."

Cy regarded the visitor for a moment, and then said:

"Yep—he's the awkwardest feller I ever did see—broke my tractor, too!"

Helen Hayes Dies Well In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Tears are the correct thing when you see the new picture made from Ernest Hemingway's novel, "A Farewell to Arms," for Helen Hayes puts on so moving a death scene in the arms of Gary Cooper that the audience in the Penn Theater acted like the Italian clouds between battles.

Mr. Seibel

Helen Hayes has never done better work, and Gary Cooper is keyed up to her achievement. She is the English nurse who falls in love with the American who has joined the Italian army. Their love-story with its tragic end is pictured with beautiful romantic delicacy, far more delicate than the book of Hemingway, who likes to shock prim readers.

Only in one instance is there a sneaking concession to respectability as His Highness the Censor defines it. Katherine is married to her lover in the hospital by a priest who happens to be loafing around. But as the priest is played by Jack LaRue with profound sympathy, the uncanonical aspects of the transaction may be overlooked. Hemingway needed no wedding, but Hollywood under the circumstances wouldn't let anybody forbid the bans.

Next to Helen Hayes the most admirable acting is done by Adolphe Menjou, as the officer friend of Gary Cooper. Menjou is at his top notch in this characterization, realistic but not overdone.

But Helen Hayes is superbly stellar both in her moments of romance and in her portrayal of courage and devotion. You'll see no better acting on the screen anywhere or any time.

Nor many better productions than the one Frank Borzage has given "Farewell to Arms." The battle scenes bring out the pathos and pity, rather than the glamor of war—the Italian atmosphere is finely caught. It's an artistic picture—followed by an amusing comedy of Zasu and Thelma to restore the gaiety of the audience.

Karloff Star In Warner

By MANUEL M. GREENWALD

Im-ho-tep, "The Mummy," was reincarnated yesterday on the Warner screen where he intrigued a large audience through the larger part of a strange and fantastic story.

"The Mummy" has been imaginatively conceived and excellently photographed, and, in spite of the flapdoodle at the bottom of it, you will find yourself unusually engrossed in its thrilling story.

Boris Karloff, laden with pounds of make-up, is the Egyptian priest who comes to life, and before he is again taken to his fathers (one is led to believe that this is final) several deaths and plenty of mysterious events transpire. Zita Johann is the modern princess under his spell and David Manners is the young archaeologist who is, in turn, under her spell. There you are — that's "The Mummy," and whether or not you like the sound of it here, it is certain to keep you wrapped up, if not like a mummy, for its entire footage.

Ta-ta and heigh-ho, "The Mummy" is a lot of hokum, sez you. But sneak into the Warner mausoleum this week and leave your equilibrium at the checkroom. Someone tramped all over ours when Im-ho-tep arose from his 3,700 years of slumber and went out for a walk. You won't believe it, of course, but neither did the scientists. And we wish you a better fate.

To relieve the tension inside, you will welcome another of those Bing Crosby short subjects in which the vo-de-do crooner acquits himself very nicely.

Busy

I Rogers is "Too Busy to work" in the photoplay of that title showing in the Enright.

Escudero Here Tonight In Dance Program

Vincente Escudero, Spanish Gypsy dancer and his company, will be seen tonight as the fourth attraction in the May Beegle series in Syria Mosque. Escudero's dances are rugged and pungent with the flavor of the soil of Spain. One of his devices for rhythmic effects is the clicking of his fingernails, which can be plainly heard in any part of the hall. He is said to be the only person able to do this. He will be assisted in his ensemble numbers by Senoritas Carmita and Carmela, dancers from Madrid, who will also give duet and solo numbers. The music will be by A. Guro, pianist, and Luis Mayoral, guitarist, also from Spain.

Lunt, Fontanne Here Monday In Comedy

Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Noel Coward will open an engagement in the Nixon Monday in Mr Coward's comedy, "Design For Living," first play in several seasons in which the Lunts have not been under the management of the Theater Guild.

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

GEORGE THE FIFTH HOTEL, PARIS, FRANCE.—It seems to me that the Paris of today is a wealthy city; far wealthier, in fact, than the city of New York. I may be very wrong, and my supposition may have no basis in fact. I judge only by the things I see around me and, until someone comes along and slips me a better method, that's the system I will have to use.

Your rabid Frenchman will toss a brick at me for my statement.

"What?" he will cry. "You say that Paris is wealthy? You must be insane. We have misery here, and plenty of it. You live in the best hotels and you see nothing but the best. How can you possibly make any statements under such conditions?"

My reply is simple—which is quite as usual. When I ride through a city and I see the most beautiful cars in the world on all sides of me, that spells money. When high-priced restaurants are so crowded that it is difficult to secure a table, that spells money. And when night clubs are so mobbed that you have to fight to get in, that spells money.

Let me explain more thoroughly. A long enough ride through Paris traffic—the worst in the entire world, by the way—will convince anyone that there is dough in this vicinity. Rolls-Royces, Minervas, Isottas, specially built Packards and Lincolns hem you in on all sides. And do they cost a herring over here? You bet your sweet life they don't.

A glance into any of these cars—yes, Hellinger has turned out to be an old glancer—gives you plenty to think about. The finest of furs and the costliest of jewels hit you right between the eyes. The women are decidedly attractive and the men are expertly groomed.

"Well," growls the rabid Frenchman, "what if there are plenty of costly cars and bejeweled women? Haven't you just as many in New York, and don't you see just as much wealth?"

Ah, but that is not the question. The United States is supposed to be the wealthiest of all nations. I should have put quotations marks around the "supposed" in that last sentence, but we'll let it go as is. Other nations bowed to our wealth when they fought for positions in the long line of those who wished to borrow. We admitted our wealth when we so foolishly tossed it around with a lavish hand.

I have no intention of bringing up the war debts or entering into a political discussion. That is not my job. I merely mention in passing that the France I have seen thus far, including Paris, has given me something of a shock. I fear very much, my friends, that when it comes to a question of debts with this nation, the sounds that are offered as wails of misery are in reality the rustlings of luxury.

The entire situation reminds me of that classic story of the well dressed grifter who stood in front of Moore's restaurant, in New York, about a year ago. Moore's serves the sportiest crowd in New York and caters only to those who want the best.

Out came Lew Brown, the energetic young producer who is also known, on occasion, as Sam Ledner. As he stepped through the door, Brown was approached by the grifter.

"I'm hungry, Lew," whined the bum. "Can you spare me the price of a meal?"

Brown dug into his pocket, brought out a dollar and handed it over. The bum looked at it.

"What's this?" he asked.

"What is it?" repeated Brown in astonishment. "It's a dollar. What's the matter? Isn't that enough for you?"

The bum shrugged his shoulders and placed the dollar in his pocket.

"Sure it's enough," he returned, "if you want to be cheap about it. But you don't suppose I can eat in Moore's for a dollar, do you?"

Last night, for dinner, I went to the Escargot D'Or, which is the restaurant I always hit for as soon as I get settled in Paris. The place is small but highly attractive. And the food, although rich, is more than delicious. The atmosphere is cordial and warm. All in all, the Escargot is one of the few places you miss when you leave Paris.

Depression in the Escargot? Not that I could notice. There were three of us and, even though we arrived a trifle in advance of the customary dinner crowd, we had to wait several minutes for a table. We lingered over the meal for perhaps an hour and a half. And when we finally left, the restaurant was still crowded and a party of four was immediately ushered to the table we had vacated.

The cost of the meal was, roughly, about $13. Aside from one bottle of wine that was not particularly costly, our only other drink was an after-dinner cordial. All of which means that the food bill alone came to almost $4 per person. And there is no jacking up of prices in this restaurant. Everyone pays the same.

All of which means that, since you have 10 French diners in this restaurant to every foreigner, there must be a few Frenchmen left who have a few pennies to spend. And you musn't forget that this is but one tiny spot in a city that is filled with eating houses of a similar nature . . .

I don't want to give much space to night club conditions here at the moment because I intend to devote the next two or three columns to a systematic resume of cabaret conditions in this fantastic town. Since I mentioned a crowded night club earlier in the column, however, I'll have to give you a short description of what I mean.

Take, for example, a place that is known as the Plantation. This spot, a gaudy and massive joint, will seat more than 800 people. The management employs three orchestras and the dancing never ceases. Drinks are a dollar each and wine costs anywhere from $4 to $8 a bottle. Surely, in poverty stricken France, you'd hardly expect such a place to be crowded.

Yet it was when I entered, and they tell me it usually does the same business. As a matter of fact, the place was so mobbed that the sixth assistant head waiter had difficulty in finding a spot in which to place me. The difficulty was finally overcome by inserting a tiny table between two large ones that were located directly beneath the largest orchestra.

My situation was highly uncomfortable. The music almost deafened me. People stepped on my feet every time they passed. My table was pushed into my lap at every opportunity. Yet I know that I must have been smiling continuously. As a Broadway reporter, it was the first time since I left New York that I felt very much at home.

No, good people, don't let them kid you. There is money in this town, and plenty of it. If you tell a Frenchman that his night clubs and restaurants are crowded, he tells you that the guests are all tourists. Which, of course, is nonsense. Any night club that depends entirely upon tourists is a garage or a shoe store before many weeks have passed.

Methinks France is very wise. To paraphrase the old adage, this nation has learned that "he who borrows and runs away will live to spend another day."

Coolidge Life On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Highlights in the career of former President Calvin Coolidge are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. The pictures show all the phases of the life of the former President from the time he began his spectacular career as Vice President until his last appearance made as a member of the railroad commission only a few weeks ago.

Dramatic fire pictures show the destruction of Tokio's largest department store. The store was filled with hundreds of employes and holiday shoppers when the fire was discovered. Many of those in the building are shown trapped by the flames. Ten were killed and several hundred injured. A graphic description is given by the Globe Trotter.

Pictures of Germany's new gasoline-driven motor train, "The Flying Hamburg," on its first run, show the train reaching a top speed of 96.3 miles an hour.

A dramatic appeal on behalf of former prison inmates who want to "go straight" is broadcast from Cleveland by "masked convict No. 13."

Subtle Humor On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Animal Kingdom," based on the Philip Barry play of the same title, an attempt to give the triangle theme a kind of spiritual quality, is the current photoplay feature in the Stanley, with Leslie Howard, Ann Harding and Myrna Loy as the three points of the familiar geometrical pattern that seems to count much with the playwrights. This time it has the wife as the enchantress and "the other woman" as the one who has the desirable ability to soothe the soul of the artistic male, and lift it above the realm in which one must barter for the flesh-pots, haggle about the cost of self-esteem and argue about choice of servants and friends. Only there is never any real argument, never any haggling, the revolt being inward.

The sophisticated theme is nicely handled, pictorially it is a swell thing, and the dialogue is smart and interesting, the acting being as close to perfect as is possible, always restrained, yet never lagging or lapsing into dullness.

Mr. Howard portrays a role he originated on the stage, that of a young publisher of high artistic ideals, who, in the absence abroad of a young woman he has long admired, falls in love with another and is married. Then it is subtly brought out that he has sold himself and stultified his artistic ideals. His wife's friends are not spiritually allied to his mentality. The word "banal" is never mentioned, but is implied by the atmosphere in which he finds himself, so he just chucks it all and goes back to his own artist friends foremost of whom is Miss Harding.

Both Miss Harding and Miss Loy, who is the wife, give highly satisfactory performances. There runs through the entire action a strong vein of comedy, supplied by William Gargan, as a pugilist turned into a butler, just the sort for Mr. Howard but n. g. for the missus. Mr. Gargan supported Mr. Howard in the stage version. Henry Stephenson, able actor, also is in the cast as the father of Mr Howard.

REVOLT OVER SHODDY GOODS SPREADING

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The consumer revolt against shoddy merchandise appears to be growing.

Incidentally, E. W. Kemmerer, Princeton economist, told me the other day that readjustment had been delayed by the failure of retail prices to keep in touch with wholesale quotations. He said that consumer buying had been checked by a tendency in some directions to palm off inferior merchandise as a substitute for quality products at lower prices.

Mr. Rukeyser

In a message to this column on the reawakening of the consumer to an appreciation of quality, George A. Hough, Jr., publisher of the Enterprise Weeklies on Cape Cod, Mass., significantly raises the question:

"Oughtn't we to be getting to the end of distressed goods and to a place where bargains cease to be bargains, but turn out to be shoddy goods made by short cuts to sell cheap?

BARTER IDEA GAINS

"If this is so, people are only fooling themselves if they continue to buy on price alone.

"Certainly business can't get far until workers and manufacturers can both make a dollar.

"Certainly to some extent quality articles are cheaper in the long run."

Where the credit system has broken down, sporadic attempts have been made in some localities to carry on trade with the niceties of credit. In Hawarden, Ia., the merchants have improvised a scrip stamped currency, which has facilitated local barter. The London Chamber of Commerce has proposed bartech as a way out, a scheme of resorting to international barter.

A barter experiment has been launched at Dayton, O., and another at Nyack, N. Y.

DEFENDS SYSTEM

In giving a philosophic basis for a return to primitive barter, which obviates the intermediary of money, Ralph Borsodi pointed out:

"Our business system is what economists call a money economy. And what we are all suffering from today is the failure of this money economy to operate as in theory it should.

"Probably the reason enterprising merchants have as yet failed to consider seriously the possibilities of salvation through barter is because they, too, believe they are as completely dependent upon our broken-down money system for their prosperity as are our bankers and manufacturers. This is not true. So long as the merchant's customers have purchasing power in some form, he can distribute merchandise not only to his own profit, but to his customers' benefit and the benefit of the manufacturers whose goods he sells. And he can do it on a much larger scale than at first sight seems possible."

Apparently barter has been started in various parts of the world. It is a clumsy and inefficient method, but until our money doctors succeed in getting the credit system to work again it is better than stagnation and idleness.

Wholesale and Jobbing Trade Conditions

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Tabloid review of wholesale and retail business conditions as reported to Bradstreet's this week from the following centers on the basis of comparisons with conditions in the same areas in the corresponding week last year:

	Whole. & Job. Trade.	Retail Trade.	Mfg. and Industry.	Col'tns.
Pittsburgh	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Chicago	Fair	Fair	Quiet	Slow
Cleveland	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Detroit	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Indianapolis	Fair	Fair	Quiet	Slow
Louisville	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Milwaukee	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Des Moines	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Duluth	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Kansas City	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
Omaha	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
St. Louis	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow
St. Paul	Quiet	Fair	Quiet	Slow
Baltimore	Quiet	Quiet	Quiet	Slow

Comment. Pittsburgh—Wholesale coal orders show marked decline due to intervening holidays; retail coal in fair demand, being stimulated by cold weather; January clearance "sales" being featured by merchants; glass and tile inactive.

Chicago—Department stores featuring extensive post-holiday "sales"; 10 per cent cut in percale prices has unsettling effect on general cotton goods quotations; steel industry starts new year with better than anticipated specifications; railroads increasing employment.

Cleveland—Steel producers receive large automobile orders; Akron tire industry on short schedule since August, 1932, but with normal replacement demand probable, 1933 prospects appear encouraging; food prices favoring consumer.

Detroit—Inventory-taking about completed at retail and preparations for January clearance "sales" general; automobile activity and employment accelerate as smaller plants resume operations following inventory period; power consumption highest in several months.

Exchanges Closed In Tribute To Coolidge

Stock exchanges throughout the country and most of the principal commodities markets are closed today as a mark of respect to the memory of former President Coolidge, whose funeral is being held in Northampton, Mass. The Chicago Board of Trade (Grain Pit) operated on a curtailed schedule, closing one hour earlier than usual.

BUSINESS

Pressed Steel Car Will Have Ample Cash If Plan Succeeds

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

PRESSED STEEL Car Company will have ample credit to provide for future operations if the refinancing plan on which the management is now working succeeds, it was learned today from an authoritative source.

The company was unable to meet a maturity on a $6,000,000 bond issue due on January 1. As a result bondholders have filed suit asking for the appointment of receivers in the courts at Trenton, N. J., and other suits have been filed in New York state. The company plans to oppose these suits and is continuing its efforts to secure the deposit of bonds under offers to pay either $250 in cash and $750.000 in new debentures, or $550 in cash for each $1,000 bond.

If sufficient bonds are deposited under either of the two arrangements the company will be able to avoid receivership and will have from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 credit placed at its disposal. This will provide for the cash payments under the refinancing plan and will leave a balance for new working capital.

* * *

Holders Continue To Deposit Bonds

HOLDERS OF THE bonds became hesitant about depositing their securities and agreeing to the refinancing plan during the week preceding the close of the year in the hopes that the maturity might be met. Since that time, however, deposits have been made in a satisfactory volume and officials of the company are hopeful that a sufficiently great majority will be deposited before January 16 to make the plan effective.

Up to the present time all but 1,200 of the 6,000 bonds of the issue have been deposited. At the end of 1931 only 4,956 of the $1,000 bonds were actually outstanding and undeposited.

With arrangements made to meet this maturity of its convertible gold 5s the Pressed Steel Car Company will have no maturities of importance until January 1, 1943, when its convertible debenture 5s will mature. These bonds are being issued under the plan by which holders of the matured issue receive $250 in cash and $750.000 in new debentures. The new debentures are convertible at the option of the holder into common stock on a basis of 25 shares for each $1,000 debenture.

* * *

Receivership Will Not Block Work on Plan

EVEN IF HOLDERS of bonds, who are unwilling to come to terms, force the company into receivership, work can be continued on the reorganization plan as a basis for taking the organization out of bankruptcy.

Regardless of whether or not the fight against receivership is successful, no material change is likely to be made in the plans for financial reorganization.

Wm. F. Southwell yesterday filed an equity suit in the Federal Court here asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Pressed Steel Car Company. The suit was filed in behalf of himself and any other bondholders who wish to join in the action with him. He is the holder of five of the 10-year 5 per cent convertible gold bonds. The bill of complaint declared that the company had $3,072,000 of bonds which matured on January 1 with no means of satisfying the claim.

STEEL DEMAND SLIGHTLY BETTER

By B. E. V. LUTY

Demand for steel has increased slightly over the rate in the last two weeks of the old year, representing a little rebound rather than beginning of the regular seasonal increase which has always marked the first two to four months of a new year.

Steel ingot production both last week and this may be estimated at about 13 per cent, representing an increase in tonnage as by rule computations take five working days for last week and six for this week.

The official report of steel ingot production in December shows an average for the month of 15.02 per cent, nearly one point above the low of last August which was 14.26.

The market lacks snap in that there were scarcely any orders dated for shipment immediately after the annual inventory date while sometimes there has been a rush of that sort. It is not felt that prospects of usual seasonal increase are thereby diminished, on the ground that buyers can take their own time in making up orders, knowing that nowadays they can secure rush shipment once they do act.

INQUIRIES IN MARKET

While improvement in demand is expected to occur chiefly by there being a wide distribution of small and medium sized orders from a great number of miscellaneous consumers, there are inquiries and negotiations promising some good sized orders in the heavy rolled products, bars, shapes and plates. While prospects for rails are far from rosy it is held likely that there will be more releases in the next couple months than in the last few months, with heavier demand as the regular season for laying rails is reached.

In view of the character of business expected the steel trade is unwilling to make any specific predictions as to how much tonnage there will be. Some observers think the recent peak rate of ingot production, 19 per cent in October, will be passed next month, while others doubt whether that will occur before March. While the trade would welcome merely seasonal increase as furnishing a breathing spell, it is more interested in such general trade recovery as would make steel demand continue to increase after the usual seasonal period, that is, after March 31.

AUTO DEMAND HOLDS

Little increase in demand is in sight from the few large consuming lines usually studied, with the exception of the automobile industry. The automotive trade as a whole accounted for 17 to 18 per cent of the limited amount of steel made last year, a larger proportion than in either of the two preceding years, but a shade under the proportion in either 1929 or 1928.

Railroads show no definite signs of increasing their steel buying, but the steel trade regards recent car loadings reports as a favorable augury.

The farm implement industry has been buying just a little more steel lately, but gives no evidence of being ready to start its regular m nufacturing season in implements for spring use.

The fabricated structural steel trade is now in a period of seasonal dullness.

Tin can prices for the year have just been announced at the lowest level in 16 years. Specifications for tin plate shipments in January have run rather light, but contracting has proceeded in manner very satisfactory to producers.

The Pittsburgh district scrap market has grown easier as mill buying has failed thus far to materialize. Dealers would sell moderate sized lots of heavy melting at $8.50 or $8.75 but no large tonnage.

INGOT OUTPUT DOWN

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Last year's steel ingot production was the lowest since 1900, measured by the figures of the American Iron and Steel Institute in comparison with Iron Age data covering the earlier period. The institute placed the year's output at 13,095,727 tons compared with 25,192,715 in 1931.

Average daily output for 1932 was 41,973 tons against 81,006 tons in the previous year. December production fell to 844,618 tons from 1,301,211 tons in December, 1931, but was moderately above the July and August figures, which marked the low point of output during 1932.

FRIENDS UPHOLD BANKING AIDE

Reports that George F. Taylor, Jr., had resigned as special state deputy secretary of banking because of exceptions filed by depositors attacking his expense accounts as receiver of the Citizens Trust Company, of Bellevue, and the Mountain City Trust Company, of Altoona, were denied here today by associates.

News of Taylor's resignation was exclusively published by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, November 20. It is effective January 14. His resignation has been contemplated since January 1, 1932, but he was persuaded to remain in the service because of the pressure of conditions.

Taylor is now in Altoona, defending a suit filed by stockholders of the Mountain City Trust Company there attacking his expense account as "excessive and illegal." He recently defended himself against similar exceptions filed by depositors of the closed Bellevue bank.

Taylor was receiver for the Franklin Savings and Trust Company, which figured prominently in the city treasury investigation a year ago.

FATHER COX, AILING, CARRIES ON

Refuses to Desert Needy for Rest; Task Grows

A rumor was spread through Pittsburgh yesterday that Father Cox, of Old St. Patrick's, was ill in Mercy Hospital. Father Cox said last night:

"As Mark Twain said when told of the report of his death, 'the rumor is greatly exaggerated.'"

However, Father Cox is performing his big task of feeding and clothing the jobless under a handicap. He is not particularly well. His friends have urged him to take a rest, but with all the responsibilities he has undertaken he feels he must stay on the job. There was a time when his tivities were easy compared with today. Conditions are such now he feels they must be given his personal attention.

DOLLAR THREAT SENDER HUNTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Guards continued to watch the home of the late Capt. Robert Dollar in San Rafaeil, and the 11-story Dollar Building here today as police sought the source of an extortion letter addressed to the widow of the former shipping magnate.

Searchs of the home and building, it was announced, failed to disclose any trace of dynamite which the letter stated had been placed in the two structures.

Natividad Perez, 50, Mexican, who fell into a police trap set for the writer of the letter, was turned over to immigration authorities, who claimed he was illegally in the United States. Police expressed belief Perez was innocent of any connection with the extortion threat and had by mere chance picked up a dummy package at a spot designated for payment of money demanded in the letter.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young — to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

HERTZ RESIGNS MOVIE POST

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The long-rumored change in control of the Paramount-Publix Corporation was in effect today following the resignation of John Hertz, omnibus magnate and turfman, as chairman of the finance committee.

As early as last fall, reports persisted in Wall street that Hertz would withdraw and that Adolph Zukor, the president, would assume the financial control of the picture company.

Hertz, as he resigned yesterday, said:

"Whatever I have been able to accomplish in the company's affairs has been accomplished because I had the co-operation of all without any question as to authority. Within the last week a question has been raised by the president as to the authority of the chairman of the finance committee to continue to function as he had up to that time. I felt that I could not accomplish the purposes for which I came to the company unless I was permitted to so function, and therefore there was no alternative for me but to tender my resignation, which I have done."

Benswanger's Progress.
Old Football Star Dies.

Plan Balkline Revival.

BUC CHIEF SHOWING WAY TO RIVALS

NO MORE FORMIDABLE starter than the Pirates will toe the scratch when the National League pennant race begins in April, but at that not all of the Pittsburgh club's strength is in the playing department. A goodly part of it is in the business office. William E. Benswanger may be the youngest club president in the major leagues, but he is showing the older chief executives a trick or two in the matter of handling a top-flight baseball outfit.

W. E. Benswanger

Clubs with the kind of players it takes to make them pennant contenders are not always rounded up easily in the spring. Some of the stars have ideas of their own about their value and do not come into line readily. But the smoothness with which President Benswanger signed first the Waner brothers, now Larry French, and probably others not yet announced, indicates a finesse and a policy of fair-dealing that will save the Buccaneer crew from much of the holdout trouble experienced by rival clubs. Pennant chances depend on harmony and a satisfied state of mind among the athletes even more than on mechanical strength, and the Pirate president certainly is doing a great job toward assuring that there will be no clouds of discontent in the Corsair sky.

ONE OF PITTSBURGH'S greatest athletes of more than 30 years ago passed on yesterday in the death of Dr. William Farrar. Before starting a dental practice here in the late '90's with Dr. M. Roy Jackson, a college and teammate, he had won high collegiate athletic honors at the University of Pennsylvania as a member of the crew and the football eleven under Coach George Woodruff.

Coming to Pittsburgh, Dr. Farrar played guard on one of the greatest professional football teams ever assembled, the D. C. & A. C. All-stars. The lineup included such old-time greats as Carl Williams, Floy! Rose, Roy Jackson, Ed Young, John Hall, Walter Okeson, Charley Gilbert, John Winstein, Dats Lawlor, Daff Gammons, Joe Jennings, Bemus Pierce and other outstanding stars of that period. Later Dr. Farrar served as an official.

THERE IS LITTLE room for doubt that Ernie Schaaf has come back. The question may have remained open after his knockout of Unknown Winston, but the way Ernie turned the tables on Stanley Poreda last night and wiped out a previous defeat by battering him into a helpless state in six rounds was enough to convince any fistic jury.

Schaaf's return to form may operate against his own stable. If he beats Primo Carnera in the proposed follow match he can't be sent against Jack Sharkey for the title, as Sharkey is one of his managers. None of the others will be qualified. They may have to call off the Sharkey show and make Jack wait for the Schmeling-Baer winner.

IN PAYING TRIBUTE to the late Kid Gleason, John McGraw tells of the tactics the gentle boys on the old Baltimore Orioles used to employ to win ball games. "Gleason always said that a man who scored a run against the Orioles really scored two runs," McGraw relates. "The runner would be bumped out of stride rounding first base, and Gleason would bump him again at second. Then Hughey Jennings would slam him as he passed short, and if a man ever got around me at third without getting the hip, I'd like to know his name. That was the way we played, and that was the game Gleason loved."

Sam Leslie

THOUGH THE BROOKLYN club's efforts to get Sam Leslie struck a snag at the time of the major league meetings, negotiations were not dropped, and it was confidently predicted by those on the inside that the deal would go through later.

But it's all off now. Max Carey finally has landed Joe Judge to play first base if the attempted comeback of Del Bissonette fails, so the dickering for Leslie has ended and the Dodger pilot is no longer interested in the Giants' extra first baseman.

THE ORIGINAL HITCH in the deal was due to Bill Terry's demand that Brooklyn give up Outfielder Johnny Frederick in exchange for Leslie. This the Dodgers refused to do, and then they tried to get Leslie on other terms.

Terry still is interested in Frederick and may attempt a different deal for him, but Brooklyn reports say he is not likely to succeed. It looks as though the Dodger outfield department will again be made up of Lefty O'Doul, Hack Wilson, Danny Taylor and Frederick.

IN BUILDING HIS varsity football teams at Southern California, Howard Jones has paid very little attention to the prominence that candidates gained as freshmen or to the positions they played on the yearling teams. Jones has done more making-over than any other coach in the game, and the results of his system have shown some striking contrasts. On the one hand, some players who had been standouts as freshmen were flops on the varsity, while on the other hand some who had so little background as to be virtual unknowns were made into all-America stars. A leading example was the great Ernie Smith. He did not even make the freshman team as a regular, yet Jones developed him into an all-America tackle.

AND SMITH WAS only one of many. Garrett Arbelbide was merely a sub halfback as a freshman, but became one of the best ends in Troy's history. Johnny Baker was a fullback in high school and became an all-America guard, though he probably would not have received that award but for his field goal against Notre Dame.

Francis Tappaan was just a fair tackle as a high school player, and became an all-America end. Gus Shaver didn't make his freshman team, being only a sub for Ernie Pinckert at quarterback, but finally won all-America honors as just about the best all-around back the Trojans ever had. And Pinckert, though a ball-carrying star in high school, was turned into a blocker and made the all-America one year when he carried the ball only twice.

ACCORDING TO SUCH an authority as Jack Doyle, of New York, Broadway's most prominent billiard room owner, the balkline style of billiard play is passe in this country. It's too difficult to become generally popular, the veteran says.

Welker Cochran

And yet it is true that balkline has been played to a greater extent during the depression than either three-cushion or pocket billiards, the explanation, no doubt, being that balkline players are better established financially than the youngsters who go in for the easier styles of the game.

FAR FROM AGREEING with Doyle, some of the leading balkline supporters are hopeful that 1933 will witness a revival of that game, and they are getting behind the movement started several weeks ago to arrange an international 18.2 championship tournament for next winter. It is understood that Welker Cochran is the latest to consent to play, and that the entries of Champion Jake Schaefer, Willie Hoppe, Eric Hagenlacher and Kinrey Matsuyama, the Japanese star, are reasonably certain along with several others. It is also planned to hold an international amateur tourney at 18.1, and national championships at both 18.1 and 18.2.

Scholastic basketball teams surveyed the battlefields today after the first championship warfare of the season and found almost all of the pre-race favorites still alive and kicking.

In yesterday's full program of inaugural competition, favorites generally came through with triumphs, few if any, real upsets being recorded.

In the City League, in Section I, Connelley sprang somewhat of a surprise by beating Taylor Allderdice, 27 to 20. South nosed out Westinghouse in a close battle, 29 to 27, and Fifth Avenue's veteran aggregation had a tough time with Peabody, winning 22 to 20.

PERRY ROUTS CARRICK

Over in Section II, Perry took Carrick with ease, 55 to 8; Allegheny doubled the score on Vocational, 32 to 16, and South Hills won from Langley, 28 to 17.

Most of the defending sectional champions won in W. P. I. A. L. struggles. Braddock, defending league champion, walloped Turtle Creek, 50 to 14; Ford City upset Apollo, 25 to 18; Monessen toppled South Brownsville, 37 to 13; Mt. Lebanon took McKees Rocks, 23 to 19; New Kensington defeated Tarentum, 31 to 19; Ambridge crushed Freedom, 48 to 14; Aliquippa beat Midland, 30 to 16; Beaver Falls won a low score game from Ellwood City, 15 to 13; Leetsdale tripped Ben Avon, 30 to 12; Monaca beat Beaver, 26 to 17, and New Brighton won over Butler, 23 to 16.

In a game that might be termed an upset, Carmichaels eked out a victory over the usually strong Waynesburg quintet, 16 to 13.

Homestead won in a non-league test with Uniontown, 26 to 23, and Scott High, one of the favorites to wrest the title from Braddock, defeated Edgewood, 18 to 11.

GUTOWSKI STARS

Several brilliant individual performances were turned in. Pugliano scored 12 of Fifth Avenue's points against Peabody; Kornick, of Perry, counted 22 against Carrick; Eddie Gutowski was good for 23 for Ambridge against Freedom, getting 11 field goals; Kominic, of New Castle, scored 14 points against Rochester; Barfinisk scored 23 and Hile 19 as Braddock swamped Turtle Creek; Watson tallied 14 for Washington against Trinity and Boss Emerick, of Swissvale, was good for 11 as his team beat Wilkinsburg.

Marietta Passers Beat Wash-Jeff

NEW CONCORD, O., Jan. 7.—Hoping for one victory out of the three games played on the present road trip, which inaugurates their 1933 basketball season, Wash-Jeff's varsity court team meets Muskingum College's crack quintet here tonight.

Last night at Marietta, O., the Presidents lost their second game in as many nights, bowing to Marietta College, 29 to 25. The Ohioans led from the start. Lieber led Wash-Jeff's attack with eight points. The lineup:

MARIETTA	G.	F.	Pts.	W. & J.	G.	F.	Pts.

KENTUCKY WINS

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Kentucky's speedy cagers set a fast and furious pace here last night in the late minutes of their basketball game with Creighton University and achieved a 32-to-26 victory over the Missouri Valley Conference champions. Creighton matched the Wildcats thrust for thrust during the first half and the score was tied six times.

Landis Reported To Have Cut Own Wages

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Though he has refused either to affirm or deny the report, it is understood that Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, has voluntarily sliced his own salary. The slice the Judge is said to have given himself is understood to have been at least $15,000. His salary has been $65,000 per year.

Since the recent meeting of the major leagues in New York, Landis has been attacked in some quarters for not slashing his own salary. It has been pointed out that players and officials have been asked to take cuts, and that it appeared unfair to reduce such salaries and not those of outstanding figures such as Landis and Babe Ruth.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE RAINING CHURCH—The santuario di San Michele in Monte Sant'Angelo, province of Puglia, Italy, has been built contiguous to the grotto of Monte Gargano, where, according to legend, the archangel Michael made a miraculous appearance in the year 493. The nave of the church is connected with the grotto giving it the appearance of great vastness. The altar and the choir are within the natural cavity of the rock, where deep obscurity and humidity reign supreme. Water seeps constantly from the height of the vault, the drops descending with monotonous regularity like rain. A spring of water rises from the rock near the altar, which is said to possess miraculous powers. The sanctuary is a great place of pilgrimage, more than 100,000 faithful ascending the mountain every year on May 8. A STRANGE CHAMPION OF FIDELITY—Duke Niccolo III da Este, who ruled Ferrara from 1383 to 1393, is the hero of popular song and tradition to whom the musical records of the people he ruled still ascribe 800 mistresses. In singing the praises of this ruler, the people still point out with pride that "on both shores of the river Po, all are the children of Niccolo." It is a historical fact that he had 92 illegitimate children. But, when one of his sons became involved in a love affair with his own stepmother, the enraged Duke ordered both culprits executed. In the same breath he also decreed the death penalty for marital infidelity in wives, and this decree claimed many victims during his reign. THE POETICAL FLAG OF ITALY—The passage in Dante's, from which the colors (white, green and red) of Italian Unity have been derived, occurs in the Divina Commedia, Purgatorio, Canto 30, verse 31-33.

TOMORROW: LA MISERABLE.

L. A. OPEN PLAY ON TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Gene Sarazen, golf's ruler of two nations, was listed as the favorite to win the Los Angeles $5,000 Open tournament which starts today.

However, the United States and British Open champion, who stepped off a train here Thursday and jostled par of the Wilshire Country Club course about rather rudely, may not have things so easy.

Several veterans and a handful of youths in that field of 128 starters are expected to cause Sarazen trouble.

Included in the favored group are Olin Dutra, the dashing National P. G. A. champion from Santa Monica; MacDonald Smith, who is defending champion; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., winner of two of the three California tournaments played to date, and Fred Morrison, Agua Caliente, Mex., champion of Pasadena.

The Los Angeles Open always has been kindly to the younger generation. Harry Cooper, Denny Shute and Ed Dudley crashed into big time golf by winning this annual trek for gold.

Those knocking at the door this year will be Archie Hambrick, 23, Zanesville, O., pro who won the Santa Monica amateur-pro test; Dick Metz, 22, assistant pro to Wood at Deal; Willie Goggin, of San Francisco, and others.

It seemed certain that whoever won the tourney would be compelled to outdistance par consistently through the 72 holes. All of California's tournaments have gone that way this year and fairways and greens of the Wilshire layout, par 71, were in excellent condition.

METRIC SYSTEM TO GET TEST

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The first test of how American track fans will take to the use of the metric system comes tonight as the seventh annual indoor meet of the Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus, opens the 1933 season of competition on the board floors.

All but one or two events are listed to be run at metric distances in the first meet to make the shift from yards, feet and inches in a big way. The feature of the meet, the Columbus 500, remains a 500-yard race but the distance event is at 5,000 meters, the sprints at 60, 80 and 100 meters and the relays at 1,600 meters.

One Olympic champion, Leo Sexton, who holds the world's record for the shot put as well, heads the big entry list with another former Georgetown athlete, Dave Adelman, as his chief rival. Other stars include Joe McCluskey, National cross-country and steeplechase champion; Paul, Debruyn, German winner of the Boston Marathon; Lt. George Lermond, of New York, and Paul Mundy, of Philadelphia, National champions at three and 10 miles; Bernie McCafferty, former Holy Cross quarter-miler, and Eddie Blake, ex-Boston star.

GENEVA GAME OFF

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Jan. 7.—Because of the illness of Cliff Aultman, first string guard, and the ankle injury of Hymie Ginsberg, first string forward, the Geneva College-Akron Goodyear basketball game, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed to February 16.

LONDOS BEATS M'MILLEN

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Jim Londos threw Jim McMillen, former University of Illinois athlete, in 52 minutes and 52 seconds in a wrestling match last night.

BOOTERS PLAY FOR TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

With the Central District Soccer League title as the prize, the Lawrenceville and Clan Douglas elevens are scheduled to swing into action at Leslie Park at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Lawrenceville is leading the Clansmen by two points, which means that a tie game will give the title to the Strip aggregation. On the other hand, Douglas must win to force Jimmy Dunlop's booters into a playoff series.

The teams are evenly balanced, so the contest can be classed as anybody's game. Many soccerites feel that Lawrenceville has a little the edge when the forward lines are checked, with Douglas having the best backfield.

One other game will be played in the circuit, Union Switch, the defending champion, will wind up its season by traveling to McKeesport to meet the Tubers.

PANTHERS NEAR KANSAS CITY

ON BOARD PITT SPECIAL, Jan. 7.—Traveling across the plains of the Middle West as fast as the train will bear them, the Pitt Panthers are due in Kansas City this evening at 6:45 o'clock.

The stop at this point will be of but one hour's duration, as the Panthers are eager to start out on the final lap of the homeward trail.

All today is to be spent on board the train. The party boarded the Pullmans yesterday afternoon at Albuquerque after spending the morning at the Indian village of Isleta, 13 miles away.

By yesterday evening the Panthers had recovered from their surprise at the immenseness of the Grand Canyon, and the quarterbacking department had started to figure out a way to beat the depression by erecting a bridge across the big ditch.

They planned a cantilever affair, with the ends being weighted down by huge masses of steel, which would automatically boost steel stock. If there wasn't enough steel they considered using the U. S. C. varsity as deadweights.

After boarding the train at Albuquerque, the members of the party were given the baskets of fruit always presented visiting teams by the University of Southern California.

Arriving in Chicago tomorrow morning, the Panthers will depart almost at once for Pittsburgh. They are due home at 8:30 tomorrow night.

SPORTSMEN BANQUET

Dr. Samuel H. Williams, zoologist of the University of Pittsburgh, will be the principal speaker at the twenty-seventh annual meeting and dinner of the Fort Pitt Ride Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel tonight.

Eastern Intercollegiate Conference competition interests the basketball varsities of Pitt and Carnegine Tech today as the home boys prepare for battles tonight. The Panthers are at home to Temple University's Owls, while Carnegie sends its Tartans to Morgantown for a setto with West Virginia.

The Skibos, by the way, are inaugurating their 1933 campaign with tonight's game and also present a new head coach in Maximillian Eugene Hannum, who'll get by just as well as plain Max.

DUKES BEAT GROVERS

Last night, Duquesne's Dukes staged a noble comeback after their defeat Tuesday by Westminster as they walloped Grove City, 50 to 28, to whet the appetites of the local folks for the program tonight.

The Panthers are confronted by the fourth undefeated team they've been called upon to battle in a row as they stack up against Temple. Some weeks ago, while touring the Mid-West, they battled Minnesota, which had a clear record up until the game with the Panthers. Then they took on Butler, also unbeaten until that time, and last week matched skill with Purdue's crack Boilermaker varsity, pre-season favorite to win the Big Ten title.

Temple hasn't been taken yet this winter, and so far has routed Johns Hopkins, Lebanon Valley and Colgate. The Owls will present a veteran lineup, with a trio of classy individual performers in Len Gudd, Eddie Beron and Howard Rosen. These lads all starred in the contest here a year ago, which was won by Pitt.

PITT LINEUP CHANGED

Coach Doc Carlson plans to start the same lineup that went to bat against Purdue, with the exception that he'll use Don McCamant at guard in place of Charley Hughes. Captain Don Smith and Skippy Hughes will be in at the forwards, with Cribbs at center and Ochsenhirt at the other guard.

Coach Hannum, after due deliberation, has decided to start his crippled stars, Lou Jagnow and Red Fergus against the Mountaineers. Both are nursing injured knees and consequently will cavort in less speedy fashion than usual.

The Pitt game is slated to get underway at 8:15 o'clock.

Grovers Routed

Chick Davies sent his revised lineup into the action against Grove City last night and after being held on fairly close terms for the first half, it ran wild in the third quarter, eventually crushing the Crimson under a 50-to-28 score.

The Duquesne attack, smoother and more flashy than it was against Westminster, was led by Sophomore Paul Birch, former Homestead High School star, who counted 19 points with eight field goals and a foul. Birch started in the place of Jim MacDougall, with Len Brenner in at center for Capt. Bunk McGeever.

At that, it was not until MacDougall went into the game in the place of Feldman that the Dukes really put on the pressure. They led at 24 to 18 at the half, but stepped away in the third period with a 16-point attack to ice the game.

The Grovers were crippled early in the second period by the loss on the personal foul rule of Bud Laycock and Steve Soich, guard and center respectively. Capt. George Stavnitsky did all he could to keep his lads in the ball game, but his efforts were not enough.

The lineup:

TUNNEY TELLS HOW MARA FIGURED IN DEMPSEY FIGHT

TIM ASSIGNED TO SWAY N. Y. COMMISSION

SYNOPSIS

Tunney's K. O. victory over Tom Gibbons on June 5, 1925, puts him in line as Jack Dempsey's challenger and the late Tex Rickard opens negotiations for that match while partisans of Harry Wills, Negro contender, start bitter "knocking" campaign against Gene. The latter agrees to fight Wills, but Harry fails to show up to sign articles, confident that the New York boxing officials would uphold his prior claim to the Dempsey match. Affairs are now nearing a climax in Tunney's career which he has described in previous chapters from his boyhood days in Greenwich Village, through the A. E. F., and up to the portals of the world boxing championship. He and Gibson now are in a contest of wits with Wills (and the "split-commission" element) for that big title shot. Gene kayos Bartley Madden at Minneapolis with "the best left hook I have ever delivered" and outpoints Johnny Risko; false fraud charges are spread by "powerful and influential cheap politicians" interested in arranging a Wills-Dempsey bout.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Gene Tunney

I went down to Florida and on January 13, 1926, received a "personal and confidential" telegram from Tex Rickard saying that Dempsey had signed and offering me terms to meet him. After dickering back and forth with Tex and not being able to budge him from his original $150,000 offer, with an optional 15 per cent, and $175,000 if the gate went to $1,000,000, Gibson boarded a train to have a contract drawn in accordance with these terms.

Rickard advised me not to come up, because of a desire to keep the contract secret. He was having trouble with the Boxing Commission. The commission warned Rickard not to negotiate with Dempsey. They had declared Dempsey ineligible because of his refusal to accept the challenge of Harry Wills, which had been on file with the commission three years. They ruled further that any promoter who negotiated with an ineligible boxer would have his license suspended.

Rickard had to feel his way quietly and secretly. He advised me not to engage in any matches. I remained in Florida, where I trained systematically and diligently. In February, unable to resist an offer of $50,000 from a Florida promoter to box Young Stribling, I called Tex up for his permission to pick up this neat sum. His consent was given when he learned who my opponent was to be.

GIBSON RETURNS PROFIT

Billy Gibson, who handled the negotiations in the Stribling match, received a $5,000 binder on signing. The Miami Jockey Club was running at that time and Billy, being a lover of thoroughbreds, invested the binder on some likely-looking horses that turned out to be nags. When the time came for the promoters to meet their second obligation in accordance with the contract, they were found to be not so responsible. Accordingly the match was called off.

The promoters squawked for their $5,000 binder, of which I learned then for the first time. Though Billy contended that they had forfeited the $5,000 by not living up to their contract, he was persuaded to return it. How he ever dug up the $5,000 remains a mystery to me, but he did.

Poor Billy's luck had turned against him in earnest. He had no sooner given back the $5,000 to the promoters than a man named Dietz for whom Billy had done many favors, swore out a warrant in Palm Beach for his arrest. Billy had given him one of his "insufficient funds" checks for $2,500. Though a group was ready to back Billy with $50,000 if necessary, it was found that the warrant had been issued illegally. It is fortunate for Billy that his judgment in picking fighters was not the same as that which he used in picking his thoroughbreds.

GENE IN MOVIES

Billy left for New York, where he talked with Rickard. He was advised by Tex to accept an offer from the Pathe Moving Picture Company for me to make a serial picture, "The Fighting Marine." Rickard thought it would be fine exploitation. It would keep my name before the public until he was ready to announce the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

Presidents of the United States are not the only persons who have to pose with a fishing line on the front lawn, dress themselves in an Iroquois costume, don overalls to pitch hay in a premature harvest, or go through any of the countless hundreds of asinine gestures for publicity. Athletes and actors do, too.

When the moving picture contract was drawn I came up from Florida to sign it, after which I went to see Rickard. During this conference Tex became very excited about the prospect of the trouble he felt he was going to have with the Boxing Commission when he announced the match between Dempsey, the ineligible champion, and Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship of the world. He asked if there was any politician we knew who could help him out. He said:

"Now this is a game we are all in and we have to help each other."

MARA'S AID SOUGHT

Billy said he would see what he could do. I voiced the same sentiment. After the meeting I got in touch with Jimmy Eagleton, who suggested going to see James Riordan, a friend of his, who also was an associate and close personal friend of Alfred E. Smith, then Governor of New York. Riordan sympathized with us, but regretted he could do nothing. He suggested that we go see a friend of his, Tim Mara, saying:

"Tim is your man."

Tim Mara was a bookmaker of ready wit and affable personality who had ingratiated himself in some way with Jim Riordan. Eagleton and I went to see Mara and acquainted him with our difficulties. He seemed to understand.

Now the reason for my personal desire to have the fight take place in New York rather than New Jersey, the site the contract called for, was that New Jersey had a law that allowed 12-round no-decision matches. The New York State boxing law called for 15 rounds with a decision. I was confident that I could outpoint Dempsey in any number of rounds; but knocking him out inside 12 was another matter. If the contest were held in New Jersey and Dempsey were on his feet at the end of 12 rounds, even though he was beaten decisively in every round, he still would be champion. In New York, although I might not knock out Dempsey, if I won on points, I would get the official decision, and with it the world heavyweight championship. The championship was what I wanted to win.

DECISION BOUT WANTED

Rickard wanted New York because a decision at the end of a contest appeals more to the public, particularly when it involves a championship. It makes a great difference in gate receipts.

Tim Mara said he would do what he could, expressing confidence that he would get a hearing because of his personal friendship with members of the commission. The next day Billy Gibson and I left for Hollywood.

On Monday, Tunney will continue his version of the maneuvers designed to bring about, or block, his match with Dempsey in New York. Gene states Gov. Al Smith "would have nothing to do with the mess." . . . "He was disgusted with all the cheap political chiseling."

GIZZY VICTOR AS DISANTIS BREAKS HAND

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

It's a bad break that doesn't turn out to be a good break for somebody.

A broken left hand suffered by Louis DiSantis, of Cleveland, late in the fourth round of his scheduled 10-round main bout with Battling Gizzy at the Arena, on the North Side, last night, prevented him from coming up for the fifth round and turned what was a rout into a technical knockout victory for Gizzy.

Gizzy didn't have a chance with the alert DiSantis, who was fighting him as a southpaw, ramming solid lefts to the body that doubled the Battler as early as the first round and had him sparring cautiously instead of fighting his customary rushing battle.

DiSantis looked like a million dollars and Gizzy like a dime until suddenly DiSantis sagged down in midring without being hit and took a count of five, with torture written upon his face. He got up at the count of the five, and finished the round, but he was in such pain in his corner that he was unable to continue and the bout was declared at an end. He weighed only 127¾ pounds against Gizzy's 133¾, but, until the accident, appeared headed for an easy victory, with Gizzy unable to fathom his southpaw style.

THOMAS BEATS JARR

Jimmy Thomas, Gizzy's bantamweight stablemate, won all of the way over Frankie Jarr, of Fort Wayne, in the first 10-round bout, but had to step to keep in front. The battle was bloody in spots, with Jarr receiving a cut over his right eye in the first round and Thomas one over his left eye on the forehead in the sixth. It was Thomas' harder hitting that enabled him to take and hold the lead.

Curly Klaas, hard-hitting light-heavyweight, of the North Side, had his hands full beating Billy Clair, of the West End, subbing on short notice for Johnny Baylog, in the second six-rounder. Clair absorbed a lot of punishment, but kept pressing and was down only once, for nine in the fifth round.

Shorty Washko, of Duquesne, won over Petey Jahn, of the North Side, in the opener. He floored Jahn for no count in the second round and for nine in the fourth.

RANDALL TO BOX KING

Tiger Joe Randall boxes Jack King, Little Rock welterweight, in the main bout at the Arena next Friday night. Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, will be one of the principals in the semi-final.

JAQUES TAKES OFFICE TODAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Herbert A. Jaques, former Harvard athlete and for two years chairman of the golf committee which developed the new ball, today will become president of the United States Golf Association, succeeding to an office his father held 23 years ago.

The new president was nominated for the post after the sudden death of Robert M. Cutting, of Chicago, who died November 2. Originally Jaques had been nominated for first vice president.

With the new ball adopted last year generally accepted by the public, Jaques sees no pressing problems confronting his presidency, and has faith that some youngster will come along to bring back the amateur golf title now held by Ross Somerville, of Canada. As to finances, Jaques said:

"We don't need money. If we make more we will enlarge our greens section and spend it. If we make less we will cut down on our expenditures. Golf, not the show, is the thing."

Jack to Attend Ring Body Meeting

HARRISBURG, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey said Harry Farrell, chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, had notified him the commission will meet in Harrisburg next Wednesday to consider holding the Max Schmeling-Max Baer bout in Pennsylvania.

Dempsey said he notified Farrell that he would attend the Commission's meeting.

BIG TEN FLOOR RACE OPENS

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The big drive for the Big Ten basketball championship opens over all fronts tonight with a classic struggle from start to finish in prospect.

On the strength of their records during the pre-conference games, Purdue, Ohio State and Northwestern were rated as the ones to beat for the title, but it was just a question of taking a blind guess. Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa, defeated only once in five starts in preliminary competition, figured they had a great chance while anything was expected from Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan, despite their poor showings so far. Chicago alone looked hopelessly out of the race.

Tonight's inaugural schedule was crammed with important games. The schedule: Chicago at Wisconsin; Northwestern at Illinois; Indiana at Ohio State; Michigan at Iowa; Purdue at Minnesota.

Purdue, the defending champion, ranked along with Ohio State and Northwestern as early favorite because of its showing this season. The Boilermakers won four out of five games but dropped one to Pittsburgh. Northwestern, meeting keen competition, also won four and lost one to Notre Dame, while Ohio State, equipped with a good center, dropped its second game to Ohio Wesleyan and then came back with surprising power to hang up a record of four and one and pile up an offensive mark of 223 points. Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois each lost one game in five starts. Iowa losing its final preliminary test to North Dakota State.

Indiana won three and lost two, Wisconsin captured two out of five, while Michigan and Chicago succeeded in winning but one out of five.

JOHNS HOPKINS LOSES

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Johns Hopkins' basketball team invaded New York last night and absorbed a 39-to-29 beating from the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy of Long Island University.

A full week-end of inter-club sport festivities is in progress today as the new City Handball League breaks into action for the first time and runs opposition to the squash racqueters, who divide attention between inaugural of the Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation tournament and the class B league schedule for the day.

The bill offers the biggest program of action to be held here this season to date and offers fitting prelude to the fancy card in prospect for next week, when the third annual golf club indoor invitation doubles tennis conclave will be added to the program.

FOUR FRAYS CARDED

Four handball frays—two apiece in the A and the B divisions of the circuit—grace this afternoon's slate. In the upper sector, Dick Koubek's classy Keystone A. C. crew invades Bellefield for battle with Lou Alman and his crack Y. M. H. A. troupe, while Al Bialas and a strong P. A. A. delegation jaunts downtown for encounter with Lee Gaskins' well-balanced Y. M. C. A. squad. In the lower wheel, the Y. M. H. A. visits Keystone and the Y. M. C. A. outfit journeys to P. A. A.

Stellar talent aplenty tangles as the class A glovesters get together. Y. M. H. A., with Alman, A. M. A. junior champion; Dave Olbum, and Sam Wolf set for singles, must turn back a Keystone attack carrying Theos Manos, perennial senior premier; Koubek, and Dunlap at the spearhead, as Y. M. C. A., with powerful combine ranged 'round the redoubtable Steve Meyers, faces the formidable Bialas-McGuinness-Kraeling phalanx of the Winged Head. Doubles combinations loom as equally able.

TOURNEY OPENS

Meanwhile at the golf club, 32 top flight squash racqueters square off in opening tourney combat. A seeded list including McCook Reed, Frank McClintock, Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, Bill Bickel, Dave Gilmore, Joe Oliver, Alex Robinson, and Dr. "Whitey" Stegeman is supplemented by such aces as Bill Hutchins, George Kepler, Dr. John O'Loughlin, Barney Wolfe, Charley Fagan, Graham McCargo, Chip Kennedy, Scotty Burke, "Quizzer" Woods, Charley Lockhart, Stan Quay, and Jim Ebbert to assure the utmost in Steel City racquet competition. Lid-lift tilts are on from 2 p. m. till 6 today and hostilities will be resumed tomorrow and continued throughout the week.

In the B squash league, three quintets stand deadlocked for top position. Two of these, Edgeworth Club and K. A. C., meet in the Keystone clubhouse, while the third, P. A. A., is at home to the tail-end Pittsburgh Golf Club aggregation.

The P. G. C. squash racquets tournament pairings:

TODAY

2 p. m.—Charles A. Woods, Jr., vs. McCook Miller, George Lockhart vs. William D. Bickel.

2:45 p. m.—David M. Gilmore vs. George C. Kennedy, George H. Flinn, Jr., vs. T. Home Nimick.

3:30 p. m.—L. W. Young vs. J. Scott Burke, Stan Quay vs. J. K. Ebbert.

4:15 p. m.—Dr. G. Stegeman vs. Charles Lockhart, D. Livingstone vs. Frank S. McClintock.

5 p. m.—C. A. Fagan Jr., vs. Dr. John L. O'Loughlin, W. B. Wolfe vs. Alexander Robinson.

5:30 p. m.—Joseph Oliver vs. Herbert G. Lytle, W. A. Gordon III vs. Graham McCargo.

SUNDAY

W. McCook Reed vs. William Hutchins, Wilfred Murtland vs. George W. Kepler, Theos Manos vs. W. C. Robinson, Jr., Alan Humphreys vs. Dr. David L. O'Loughlin.

BRUNDAGE SEES BOOM FOR AMATEURS

By AVERY BRUNDAGE
A. A. U. and Olympic Association President.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Amateur sports stuck out its chest in 1932, and faces another banner season in 1933.

Given impetus by the Olympic Games, amateur sports had its greatest year in history.

For 1933 there are hopes of another outstanding year. Present plans of the management of the Century of Progress, the World's Fair to be held in Chicago, contemplate a complete program of sports and games, including many international events, so that the momentum gained in 1932 will not be lost.

The greatest year in history, his rating for 1932 is established not because of quality of performance, but more especially since in the past year the true importance of amateur sport has been demonstrated. People of all nations, faced by the collapse of business and industry, witnessing the crashing of reputations and the failure of established institutions, and almost convinced that there is something wrong with our form of civilization, turned for relief and recreation to clean, wholesome amateur sports and games.

OLYMPICS TOP LIST

The great event of 1932 from the viewpoint of sport was, of course, the Olympic Games. Six months ago, when we were trying to gather together enough money to get the American team to Los Angeles, we were repeatedly asked by those solicited why the Games were not postponed or abandoned, with general conditions as they were.

Leaders of amateur sport not only in this country but in all the world felt, however, that now was above all, the time to carry on. How right they were is shown by the fact that despite the depression, the games of the tenth Olympiad were the finest ever held in every respect, athletically, socially, and even financially.

Three or four million dollars were invested in the games at Lake Placid and at Los Angeles before the gates were thrown open. Why all this trouble and expense for an event of this kind? Certainly not just to determine the best athletes in the world through a series of athletic competitions. It is the auxiliary results from the Olympic Games that count—the meeting on the friendly field of sport of the representatives of 50 different countries, the association in the council room of the sport leaders of these countries, the spreading of good feeling among men of different nationality, of different race, of different habits of life. The Olympic Games have without question done more to create international good will than any other one thing.

GREAT PERFORMANCES

Track and field athletics perhaps provided the greatest number of thrilling performances during the year. Following a winter and spring of record breaking, in the eight days of competition at Los Angeles, 20 new Olympic and seven new world records in the 23 events for men, and six new Olympic and world records in six events for women, were made in the most brilliant program of events ever held.

It is hard to choose between William Carr's phenomenal 46.2 seconds for the 400 meters and the race in which Tom Hampson, of England, broke 1:50 for the 800 meters for the first time in history. The new record of 8462.23 points in the decathlon created by Jim Bausch, of Kansas, and Eddie Tolan's double win in the dashes deserve mention. Leo Sexton's shot putting, the work of Gene Venzke and George Spitz in the indoor meets, and the marvelous pole vaulting at Palo Alto in the tryouts, long will be remembered.

Chicago Amateurs Beat Coast Boxers

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Amateur Catholic boxers representing the Chicago Youth Order emerged victorious last night in 16 thrilling bouts with youths from Los Angeles and San Francisco. Chicagoans winning by a score of 6 to 4, received the trophy presented by Cardinal George M. Mundelein in the Catholic National Amateur championship.

A crowd of 16,535 filled the Chicago Stadium to witness the warfare. The receipts, amounting to $25,000 were voted to the Catholic charities.

Rangers On Edge For Title Game

Toby Uansa's Rox Rangers, rulers of the lightweight football roost for the past three years, are primed for their Lightweight Conference championship tussle tomorrow afternoon with the Broadway Mounts. The teams will meet at Greenlee Field in a long-delayed tussle for the title.

After much delay, the Mounts reached the title round by eliminating the J. J. Doyles, 2 to 0, in an indoor game at the Hunt Armory, East End. The Rangers crushed the J. J. Veronas to win the right to battle with the Broadway eleven.

The contest is slated to get under way at 2:15 o'clock.

OLYMPICS WIN

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The Detroit Olympics turned back the Windsor Bulldogs, 3 to 2, last night to move into fourth place in the International Hockey League standing by a one-point margin. It was Detroit's second victory over the Bulldogs on Windsor ice this season.

Don't Give Up Clean Ideals To Gain Popularity

"Shall Bob and I begin being like everyone else?"

In other words, must they make whoopee to run with the pack?

Marie wonders.

Just now she and Bob are Lone Wolves, because "everyone else" is going in for wild parties and they don't. So—

"We hardly ever get asked anywhere!" she moans.

What's your answer?

Shall they stick to their guns? Continue to be themselves? Or shall they go ga-ga like the rest?

Dear Elsie:

I never thought that I would need any help, but I find that I do, so here I am. Will you please give me some advice? I just can't quite figure this thing out by myself.

I am engaged to a very fine young fellow. I'll call him Bob, we expected to get married last fall, but the depression beat us to it. He lost his job and is not working now except part time.

We get around to shows at least once a week, and I do not pay for them. While he was working he saved his money. Not that he was tight. He wasn't. He gave me valuable presents when Christmas or my birthday came around. But he was careful.

MISS INVITATIONS

Here is the real trouble that I don't know what to do about. He doesn't drink or smoke. No; he is by no means a "sissy." He is liked wherever we go. But we never get invited to parties on account of everybody else drinking and smoking. Parties nowadays seem to be nothing but that, so it leaves us out.

We dance very little, but we are active in winter sports and that sort of thing. We like to swim, too. But we hate to be left out of things this way.

What shall we do? Shall we start being like all the rest of the couples we know, and enjoy life, no matter what kind of enjoyment there seems to be? Or should we go on as we are now?

We are 22 and 23 years old. Please help us. MARIE.

FIND OTHER FRIENDS

Shall you go in for "enjoying life" any old way, just to get asked out?

Well, now let me ask you one, youngster.

Frankly, would you enjoy drinking and carousing? Or are you so hungry for popularity that you're almost willing to do anything to get it? My guess is that you wouldn't and you are.

And if that's so—you'd only be two-timing yourselves if you did consent to be like "everyone else."

Stop trying to be something you are not, youngster. Stop trying to go with people you don't honestly like or respect. Stick by your clean ideals, and find people who'll help you stick.

I know that this "partying" business has gone pretty far, but there are plenty of regular folks in the world who like regular fun, if you'll look around for them.

So keep on living sanely and finely, honey. Don't sell yourselves out just because the loneliness presses hard. You can have the sort of life you want—and it's worth waiting for!

"A BAD SIGN"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Cupid scowls, the world smiles, and it's a sign that the golden honeymoon is going under a slight cloud when Gloriette, in her cloudy tea-gown with the latest in fringe flashing pleasingly when she moves, suddenly takes George down off his pedestral long enough to say plaintively, "George, darling, why don't you try sometimes to look like this!"

And George, amazed, taken aback, aghast, of a jitter, takes a look at "this," and it turns out to be impossibly beautiful men with coat-hanger shoulders, and as tidy as a birthday present still in the tissue-paper. "Well-dressed men" at all times. These are the fly in the amber bead to George's erstwhile adoring bride. George just now is taking his ease of a winter night, cozily by the bright rustling fire in the delectable company of Gloriette, as pretty a maiden as ever Prince Charming himself did wed, in slippers and coatless. The contrast, he sees, is overpowering, between himself, and these fashion-plates.

Cupid withdraws into himself—outraged. When Gloriette first finds George not Prince of the Universe without a flaw, and begins to try to make him over, he feels that the light of the honeymoon is waning a bit, and perhaps he'd better be traveling.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Continue Outdoor Life During Winter Months

During the summer months the health of our people is at its best. Outdoor life and exercise are largely responsible for this. There are other factors, including daily bathing, sun baths, drinking generously of water and partaking of a diet containing an abundance of vegetables and fruits. The simple rules of good health are followed during the summer months but neglected during the fall and winter.

Dr. Copeland

There can be no doubt that many persons fail to enjoy good health because they are not out-of doors enough. They appear to believe that the winter months should be spent indoors, free from the healthful activities of summer.

Many persons drink half as much water during the winter as they do in summer. In cold weather there is less perspiration and the body requires less water, but the beneficial effects of drinking an abundance of water must not be overlooked. Water dilutes the body poisons and helps to flush the kidneys and intestines.

There are those who avoid daily baths in the winter because they fear colds. Yet during the summer these same persons bathe daily and are in good physical health.

The seasonal change of habits does not end with bathing. They eat more food and take less exercise during the winter months. If they continued their summer activities throughout the year, I am confident their health would be greatly benefited.

Of course, some forms of recreation cannot be indulged in during the winter months. But walking is one form of exercise that is available throughout the year. Long walks are always a great health builder. I can think of no better form of exercise than walking. It improves the appetite and aids digestion. Such exercise promotes elimination, prevents loss of sleep at night and guards against certain nervous disturbances. Walk outdoors whenever the weather permits.

Get your full share of sunshine during the winter months. It is just as important to obtain your sun bath at this time of the year as it is during the warm weather.

If you take long hikes, dress warmly, wear broad and comfortable shoes with thick soles. Hold your chin up, your stomach in and your spine straight. Walk vigorously and act as if living were a joy.

Of course you will be sensible about the things you do for health's sake. You will not over-exercise. You will exercise regularly, but not too strenuously.

Remember that rest is just as important as exercise. Exercise that over-fatigues you is harmful.

Dress warmly and stay outdoors as much as possible. Those who enjoy outdoor life are less susceptible to the common cold and other infectious diseases.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

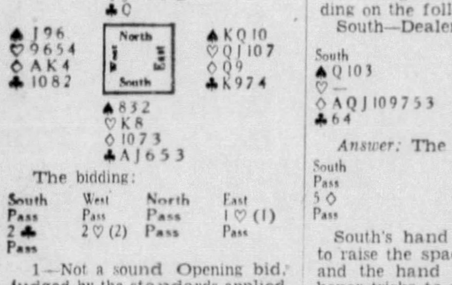
Defending a Part-Score

Those who play Rubber Bridge have had it driven home to them that it is important to defend against part-scores. There is probably no more unsatisfactory partner at the Bridge table than the one who will cheerfully permit his adversaries to make a part-score of 60, 70 or 90, when it could have been defeated with a negligible set or possibly even awarded with the making of a part-score, and then take a penalty of 450 or more points to prevent the adversaries from making a game.

The value of a part-score, as applied to Bridge, has been brought vividly home to Duplicate players by the new laws of Duplicate Bridge, under which a bonus of 100 points is awarded for the making of any score of less than game. The result of this, so far as Duplicate play is concerned, is to practically require that no hands be passed out. Hence the obligation upon the Fourth Hand, after all the other players have passed, is a heavy one. To bid and be set or to bid and make a part-score is frequently a very close question, particularly on hands of the type below, which are as common in Duplicate as in Rubber Bridge.

South Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♡ (1)
2 ♣	2 ♡ (2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Not a sound Opening bid, judged by the standards applied to Rubber Bridge, when a player may risk all chance of loss by simply passing and awaiting what the next deal may bring, but an almost compulsory Opening Hand in Duplicate, particularly under match-point scoring.

2—While West has little beyond the tricks which his partner is entitled to expect, whether he passes or not, still, holding four trumps, he must disclose that he has some support for his partner's bid. The Raise is perfectly sound.

The play of the hand presented an opportunity for North and South to be plus rather than minus, as the Opening lead of the spade would have insured this result. However, South decided that, inasmuch as his partner had passed his bid, the problem of defense was entirely up to him, so he laid down the Ace of clubs and followed with another club when North's Queen dropped on the trick. North ruffed and returned a small spade, hoping to place South in the lead for a club return. East won and laid down one of his hearts. South won with the King and led another round of clubs, but North's ruffing power was exhausted. As a matter of fact, in the actual game this was ruffed with the Ace of trumps, but no more tricks remained for the North and South partnership, save only the Ace of spades.

Today's Question

Please give the correct bidding on the following hand:

◇ A Q J 10 9 7 5 3	◇ 8 2
♣ 6 4	♣ A 9 5 3

Answer: The bidding:

South	North
Pass	1 ♠
5 ◇	6 ◇
Pass

South's hand is too freakish to raise the spades immediately and the hand is too weak in honor-tricks to consider a Forcing Takeout. Therefore, the immediate jump to five diamonds is the best procedure. North's six-bid is quite obvious.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Correct Form of Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I belong to a "relative" club of married women only. I was appointed by our president to send birthday and wedding anniversary cards to each member. I addressed both cards to the member only, as Mrs. Ruth Worthington.

The husband of one of our members remarked that I should address the anniversary cards to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Worthington and the birthday cards to Mrs. Ruth Worthington.

What is the proper way of addressing these cards?

B.

I agree with this gentleman that it would be more consistent to address the wedding anniversary cards to those both concerned: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Worthington. When you send out these cards in the future, I do hope that you will decide to do this.

The birthday cards would, naturally, be addressed only to the person having the birthday. And please, please, don't address them with the use of the first name. The envelope should be addressed with the formal name: Mrs. Edward Worthington. The message inside may use the first name all it wishes, for that is private. But the envelope is for the public, and should carry the formal name, the name such as it would be on the woman's visiting-card.

Baby Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A host of my girl friends gave me a baby shower. Will it be proper to send birth announcements to all of these people when the baby arrives? I wouldn't want them to think I expected anything from them because they have already showered me with gifts. Please tell me what to do. O.

Don't think of these charming and gracious announcements as bids for gifts. They aren't, and needn't be regarded this way by either the sender or the receiver.

And you should send announcements to all of your list of friends. If you omit anyone, and especially those who have been so friendly and generous to you, that person would have a distinct right to "wonder" at such an omission.

A tablespoonful of borax to every gallon of water both for washing and rinsing will keep flannels soft and a good color.

Nancy Page Quilt Club

Garden Bouquet Quilt -- Block 16 -- Balloon Flower

KEEP QUILT PATTERNS IN BEAUTIFUL SCRAP-BOOK

You will want to preserve the attractive quilt patterns each week in the beautiful Quilt Scrapbook which Nancy Page has designed. All directions, including the unique quilted cover, are contained in the illustrated Free Quilt Scrapbook Leaflet which you may have by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Nancy Page, in care of this paper.

"If I called this flower a platycodon I don't suppose many of you would know what I meant. But if I refer to it as a balloon flower open to the breeze and sun, you would recognize it at once. Am I right?"

"Right you are, Nancy. We recognize it, but what color shall we make it?"

"The balloon flower is blue or white. Since we are making these flowers on a white background, I suggest that you use blue. You might use a fine blue and white check or stripe. That will give the effect you want. Be careful, though, that you do not choose too dark or strong a blue. Now let's go to work."

The members did just as you have learned to do. First, they cut the pattern from paper, traced it lightly on white triangle, traced it again on lightweight cardboard. Then they put the original with its accompanying directions in the Nancy Page quilt scrapbook for safe keeping. If you haven't the directions for making one of those scrapbooks, write to your paper for the leaflet.

After the cardboard tracing was made, it was cut into its parts. These were laid on the color-fast, soft material of which the flower, leaves and stem would be made. For the stem, Nancy suggests, as you know, bias tape. Its use saves so much work and insures even stems.

In cutting the pieces, an allowance of one-quarter inch was made on all sides for turning raw edges under. This was done, basted and pressed. Then the pieces were pinned in place according to light tracery. The appliqueing was done by means of slanting, invisible hemming stitch. After the birds were appliqued, the block was ready to be put into the quilt.

By the time this block was finished, the fourth row of urns with their birds and flowers was completed. Now the group was ready to add the white diamonds. The four blocks, the daffodil, poppy, rose and balloon flower were seamed to lower sides of white diamonds that were joining the third row of flowers. In each case the lower left of a diamond was seamed to the upper right of a new block, and the lower right to the upper left. Nancy admitted this sounded complicated, but it wasn't, once the pieces were laid out on a flat surface. It is just a matter of putting the white diamonds in between the flower block diamonds. At the two outer sides of the quilt there is a white triangle, in place of a white diamond. These triangles later furnish the straight sides of quilt to which a border is attached.

The club worked so steadily at the seaming and joining that they scarcely noticed Nancy when she came in with Chinese tea and rice flour cakes. She explained that these were in keeping since the flower was often called a Chinese bell flower.

BACK BLOCKS SUPPLIED

In the event you have missed any of the Garden Bouquet Quilt blocks previously published in this paper, please send 10 cents for each block missing. Also inclose stamped, addressed envelope. Address Nancy Page, care of this paper.

Heart of a Wife

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Husband Are Curious About Hugh

There was panic in the stare I gave Dicky, as I said "you mean I must tell Harry about Robert Savarin's legacy to Lillian?"

"Who else?" Dicky countered coolly. "Think a second! Lil's so near a breakdown now that any trifle will turn the scale. After this thing is over, she could know the source of the money given to the kidnapers. Until then, let her think Old Phil is putting up the cash. But Harry must know. His consent is the only one needed, as his feeling in the matter is the only thing involved. If it were not for that, you know Lillian would accept the legacy gladly."

Yes, Dicky was right. I could not add a feather's weight of anxiety to Lillian's burden. I must face Harry Underwood as I had faced Dicky, and with relief at Dicky's calmness under the revelation, I began to take heart for the interview with Lillian's husband.

"You're the only one that's drawn any kind of break out of this mess," Dicky commented, with an uncanny interpretation of a thought of mine, as quickly roused as it was quickly suppressed. "If you'd spilled this either to me or Harry at any other time than an emergency like this, there would not have been enough left of you to put through a grinder."

PUZZLED ABOUT HUGH

"Do you think I ought to tell him right away?" I asked.

"No. With Phil's offer, and the certainty of Hugh's aid—whatever else that hombre is, he isn't stingy—everything can be taken care of temporarily. I believe Dad's idea is to put up a stall in that message I'm dropping tomorrow—to bring out what the kidnapers really want. So there's a conference on in the next half hour, to which incidentally, Hugh isn't invited."

"That's because he doesn't want the Brixtons to know he is down here at all," I said.

"Yes, I know; but I wish I knew the 'lone hand' he said he was playing. This thing is like a Chinese puzzle."

"Oh!" I said sharply, and at Dicky's astonished look, I told him of the Chinese whose queer actions Lucy, the lame maid at Whitney Hall, had seen.

"It's probably 'just one of those things,'" Dicky commented. "On the other hand, anything is likely to be of consequence in this crazy quilt. Shall we have dinner trays sent up? Nobody's going down to the dining-room, but I'm ravenous. I took sandwiches along, but they weren't very satisfying for a whole day's flying."

"I should think not, you poor boy," I said. "I'll have the menus sent up right away."

"I'll take a shower while I'm waiting."

CONFERENCE HELD

He went into the bathroom, and when I had given the dinner order I went to Lillian's sitting room and to Helena's, to see if there was anything I could do for either of them. I found them both quiet—the numbness that continued anguish brings was mercifully upon them both, I guessed—and they were being carefully tended. Helena by her husband and her son, Lillian by Harry and Mary. Neither Noel nor his father was to be seen, and Mary rose at my entrance.

"Do you need me any more, Aunt Lillian?" she asked prettily, and Lillian smiled wanly at her.

"No, dear, I'm going to rest until the conference."

It was a short conference, and Samuel Brixton dominated it by the tacit consent of all the others in the room. He asked for the sums in cash that could be raised in the next 24 hours, and seemed impressed and grateful at Philip Veritzen's offer to make up the remainder.

"But I think, myself, that they are stalling," he said swaggeringly, at last. "I think we ought to drop a note saying we can't raise that much in so short a time, and that they either must give us more time, or make their demands less. That'll give us more time, anyway, and they may come to their senses."

"I agree," my father said, quickly, "and the rest of you?"

We all nodded assent, and my father rather ostentatiously drew pen and paper to him; but Sam Brixton was before him.

"I'll fix it up," he said hastily.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Checks are endorsed this season and so there is much applause for a frock of black and white plaided woolen in a check design. There is a swagger coat of gray caracul kid lined with a checked woolen.

Chic comfort is attainable in the new woolens combined with knitted fabrics. Grand for country or morning wear in town is a three-quarter coat costume of wine red diagonal woolen, with a sweater of knitted wine and white, the same knitted lining the coat and making the revers.

Sometimes one finds a frock that one can wear to almost any but the grandest occasion. Such a gem is a model in black satin with a bodice reaching below the waist to form a pointed yoke in front. This is of oyster white satin. The narrow belt is of both shades and the skirt is a straight wrap-around affair. The neckline is square in front and pointed in back.

What do you care if it is cold if you have one of the new smart seal-lin capes. A grand new model has a trimming of silver fox, the head peering over the left shoulder and the skin continuing down the right side of the cape.

PIRATES SIGN MANY STARS FOR 1933

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Bill Benswanger, it developed today, is making rapid progress toward getting his Pirate aces safely through the portals of the John Hancock Society.

Larry French

At his office in the Flannery Building, Oakland, Prexy Bill awaits the arrival of Pitcher Larry French's signed contract. The document is reported on its way from Hollywood, Cal., where the clever lefthander is wintering with his family.

And French did not sign at any depression figures, according to the Hollywood report. The willing worker, it would seem, was financially rewarded for his exemplary services. Larry was well paid last year, but his employers apparently figured he is worth a lot, despite the fact that he is but 24.

EARLY BIRD STUFF

Although more than five weeks remain before the expiration of the time limit on the mailing of contracts, the Pirate president has taken time by the forelock in such a manner as to cause a lot of comfort among the various Stove League chapters of these diggins.

As reported exclusively in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph a few weeks ago, the famous Waner boys are signed, sealed and delivered for the next campaign. There is more than a hint, too, that Benswanger has some other luminaries safely in the fold, so far as contracts are concerned.

Bill made the last voyage of the Pirate Argosy to Chicago last September at which time he is believed to have got in an oar as well as a fountain pen in the furtherance of the time-honored ship. Benswanger may have signed several of the topliners on that jaunt which was not altogether a health trip.

SKILLED LABOR COSTLY

Fred Lindstrom, a new Buccaneer of the swashbuckling type, probably has not signed his contract as yet, but Fred, like the others, has plenty of time. The Viking adventurer was one of John McGraw's high-priced deckhands and his change of address means that the Pirates assumed additional expense, but the policy of the local club has been anything but cheap in these perilous times.

Nothing definite has been given out regarding the status of Heinie Meine. There has been an intimation that the star righthander would be traded were the home officials convinced that a barter would bring them a dependable first-string slab performer, but maybe Heine will be at the old stand when the bell rings.

Pitt Star

SCHAAF STOPS STAN POREDA IN SIXTH

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Blond Ernie Schaaf has evened another old score and now can find only one stain on his fistic escutcheon.

The burly Boston heavyweight, apparently sliding clear out of the picture a few months ago, advanced another big step in his comeback campaign last night when he stopped Stanley Poreda, youthful Jersey City puncher, in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden.

Once more the invincible slugger of 1931 and early 1932, Schaaf floored Poreda four times before Referee Arthur Donovan halted hostilities after 28 seconds of the sixth.

It was Poreda who started Schaaf on his slump early this summer. After Stanley had given him a beating in 10 rounds, the Boston star was trounced by Max Baer and then beaten by Unknown Winston. Only the Baer defeat now remains unavenged for Schaaf recently knocked out Winston in six rounds.

After the first round, Poreda never had a chance with the husky New Englander. Early in the second round, Schaaf caught the Jerseyman flush on the chin with a smashing right and Poreda went down. Instead of taking a count of nine, the groggy Poreda came up at four, took a fearful lacing and went down once more just as the bell came to his rescue.

Stanley got through the third round with a minimum of difficulty, but two solid rights to the head sent him down for nine in the fourth round.

Through the fifth round Schaaf belabored his opponent lustily and then floored him with a savage right cross early in the sixth round. That was the final punch, for the referee stepped in and halted the uneven struggle.

A crowd of 7,000 saw the show. Schaaf weighed 209¼ pounds; Poreda, 203.

VANG POLOISTS FACE CAVALRY

With George Vang back in the fold, the team which bears his name tonight is scheduled to meet the 303th Cavalry polo ists on the tanbark of the Hurst Armory as the Pittsburgh Polo League resumes the program of Saturday night attractions.

Supporting Vang at No. 2 is Paul Mazuzan, while Howard Adams rides No. 3. Lieut. L. D. Clay, former West Point mallet wielder, will share the No. 1 duties with Vang.

Sporting the Cavalry yellow at the head of the toss-in column will be Lieut. W. J. Young, with Lieut. Morris Linton at No. 2, and Lieut. Elliott E. Perritt, Jr., pilot of the Cavalry brig, at the defensive No. 3.

DARTMOUTH, TIGERS SIGN

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—The ressumption of football relations between Princeton and Dartmouth will make the Green schedule for 1933 one of the stiffest in many years.

After preliminary games with Norwich, Vermont and Bates, Dartmouth will face Pennsylvania, Harvard, Yale, Cornell and Chicago on successive Saturdays.

Dartmouth-Princeton gridiron relations, which date back to 1897, lapsed in 1919 when Jack Cannell, now Dartmouth head coach, was the Green quarterback.

The two teams have met 13 times with the Tigers holding a decided advantage. They won nine games to Dartmouth's three.

Both games will be played in Palmer Stadium at Princeton. The 1933 encounter will be held November 11, the date originally set for the Princeton-Lehigh and Dartmouth-New Hampshire contests. The 1934 game will be played on November 24, the Saturday following the traditional Princeton-Yale clash.

Fritz Crisler, Nassau football coach, joined Art Lane, captain-elect of the 1933 Tiger eleven, in expressing approval of the resumption of grid relations. He said:

"One of the most important phases of the new series is the fact that the negotiations were influenced by undergraduate sentiment."

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

—By GIB MARSH—

Throughout the country the owners of fashionable canines are preparing their kennel favorites for the annual bench show of the famous Westminster Kennel Club, in Madison Square Garden, New York, February 13 to 15. Like all pastimes of the outdoors, which interest hunters, anglers, marksmen and patrons of field trials, the bench show sport has suffered because of the industrial and financial problems of the country. However, the famous show of the Westminster Kennel Club likely will bench, as usual, more than 2,000 head of dogs of all breeds.

A winner of the best of breed ribbon is regarded as the national bench champion when such a ribbon is won at the New York show. To win such a ribbon the dog must possess everything in style and conformation, for the best dogs of all breeds are sent there from all sections of the United States, Canada, and even from the British Isles. While many of the kennel clubs which have been included in the winter circuit of the American Kennel Club, the controlling body of the sport will hold shows, scores of the smaller kennel clubs have abandoned plans for staging shows this year because of the uncertainty of the gate receipts.

The breeding kennels throughout the country have suffered from the depression, especially the kennels which raise the large breeds, such as danes, German shepherds, collies, doberman pinchers and the other larger types which are included in the working dog classification.

The breeders of the various terrier dogs and sporting dogs and sporting hounds seem to be weathering the confusion the country is experiencing. Terriers are not large feeders, and there always will be a demand for hunting dogs and hounds by the sportsmen. The preparations for the New York show are as elaborate as formerly and there is no doubt the lovers of the bench show sport will observe a wonderful exhibition of dogs of all breeds.

State Teams Join Roller Hockey Loop

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Fred Warak, of Cleveland, has been named temporary president of the Midwest Roller Hockey League.

The league, reviving a sport popular 15 years ago, is composed of six teams—Buffalo, N. Y., Erie and New Castle, Pa., Salem, Cleveland and Toledo, O., and Detroit, Mich.

Thomas C. McKee, owner of the Cleveland franchise, said the league's opening game would be played at Cleveland January 14, with Detroit opposing Cleveland.

Arizmendi Wins Over Archie Bell

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Baby Arizmendi today has a healthy respect for the ring cleverness of the veteran New Yorker, Archie Bell.

Arizmendi, crack Mexican battler, had to put on a stirring finish to gain the decision over Bell in a 10-round bout last night. Arizmendi's victory was decisive enough, but he had to work at top speed to win.

Champ Increases Lead Over Ponzi

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Ralph Greenleaf, national champion, trounced Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, in the ninth and tenth blocks of the pocket billiard exhibition m[illegible] and today holds a lead of [illegible] to 979.

Greenleaf s[illegible] the afternoon block yesterday, [illegible]0 to 30 in three innings, and the n[illegible] session, 128 to 26, also in three innings. The champion's high runs were 52 and 50; Ponzi's, 18 and 26.

A. A. U. Asked to Bar Eastern Ice Teams

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Charles F. Gorman, chairman of the hockey committee of the N. E. A. A. U., has requested the registration committee of that body to refuse permits to any New England hockey team to play the Atlantic City Sea Gulls or the Baltimore club.

The latter outfit, Gorman said, had two former Boston players who had not received proper transfers from the New England body. The Sea Gulls, he added, were banned by the Ottawa Hockey Association.

Gorman also said he protested to the Middle Atlantic Association of New York against the Bronx team because of two players registered to the Nashua, N. H., club and not transferred.

A. A. U. Asked to Bar Eastern Ice Teams

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(AP.)—Charles F. Gorman, chairman of the hockey committee of the N. E. A. A. U., has requested the registration committee of that body to refuse permits to any New England hockey team to play the Atlantic City Sea Gulls or the Baltimore club.

The latter outfit, Gorman said, had two former Boston players who had not received proper transfers from the New England body. The Sea Gulls, he added, were banned by the Ottawa Hockey Association.

Gorman also said he protested to the Middle Atlantic Association of New York against the Bronx team because of two players registered to the Nashua, N. H., club and not transferred.

MARY FAITH

Story of a Girl With Husband Who Wouldn't Grow Up

By BEATRICE BURTON

Kim Still Thinks That His Marriage to Mary Faith Was a Mistake

CHAPTER XXV.

"And are you going to stay here now, Kimberley?" his mother asked him.

"No." His lips came together with a snap. "No—I'm more sure than ever that it was a mistake for Mary Faith and me to be married. I came here tonight because I wanted to talk to her about divorcing me. It's not right for us to be tied up to each other when we've stopped caring for each other. You feel that way about it yourself, don't you, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith sat in rigid agony on the very edge of her chair, her hands clasped tightly in her lap.

Her dark blue eyes were very big in her white face and there were faint shadows under them. Her lips scarcely moved as she spoke.

"I don't know, Kim."

"You don't know?" He was exasperated. "What do you mean, you don't know?"

"Well, I don't believe in divorce, Kim. And don't you remember what we promised each other the day we were married? —To live together all our lives."

"Look here, Mary Faith, I'm not going to sit here and argue the fine points of the marriage service with you," said Kim, dismissing his marriage vows with a wave of his hand. "I came here to ask you to divorce me. I don't care about you the way I did, and you seem to be getting along fairly well without me. You have my mother on your side . . ."

LOSES HIS TEMPER

"You talk as if I were your enemy, and I'm not," Mary Faith interrupted him quietly. "I love you, Kim, and I'm not going to give you up to that Janet-woman without a struggle. Last year when you came to me and told me you couldn't live without her I gave you up—and three months later you married me. Now you want to give me up, and marry her. I suppose . . . But I think you ought to wait a while and find out how you really feel about her and about me. Time can settle a lot of things that nothing else on earth can settle, Kim."

He lost his temper then. "You talk like a fool," he said, furious with anger. "You talk to me as if I were a child that didn't know its own mind. Now see here, I'm going through with this thing—"

"All right," Mary Faith broke in upon him once more. "You'll have to do it, Kim. I care for you too much to give you up, and besides, I know you'll not be happy with that girl. You don't love her . . . You just think that you do because she follows you around and it flatters you to have her do it. If you really loved her the way you think you do you would have married her 'way last fall when you were as free as air, Kim Farrell!"

She got up and started out of the room, and he looked after her, wondering how a creature so yielding and gentle by nature, could be so stubborn and determined all at once. At the door she turned and faced him once more.

"If you feel like this about her in six months I'll listen to you, Kim," she said. "It's July now. You come to me again in February."

TIME DRAGS BY

In February the baby would be a month old.

The months of the summer dragged by. Heat shimmered above the pavements of Spring street every day in a parched August. The long days were all alike to Mary Faith except that one day she might have lettuce and rye bread sandwiches in her lunch and the next day there might be deviled egg and white bread. One week she might be reading "The Great Gatsby" and the next one she might have "Joanna Godden" open on her typewriter while she ate her lunch.

On the first Monday in September—Labor Day—it rained as it always does on holidays, and Mrs. Farrell went down to Garrettsville on the bus to spend a week with Aunt Ella.

She came back to town on the following Monday with yards and yards of white cloth of different kinds—flanelette for the baby's nightgowns, sheer muslin for the tiny dresses, and soft cotton for the underthings.

"I bought it down there for half what we'd have to pay for it up here in town," she said as she showed it to Mary Faith. "We'll make it all up by hand, what do you say? I do like to see dainty little stitches in baby clothes."

On the first of October Mary Faith gave up her position with Florrie Bond. She and Mrs. Farrell spent the rest of that blue-and-russet month cleaning house and painting a small white bed that they found in a second-hand store on River street.

JEAN VISITS

In November they settled down to make the clothes for the baby. They ate their meals in the kitchen, and the dining room became a temporary sewing room filled with white garments that made Mary Faith fairly ache with their heart-rending littleness. Little bibs, little jackets, little gowns.

Aunt Ella sent a pair of crib blankets up from Garrettsville at Christmas—pale blue with white Peter Rabbits running all over them. Jean brought a pair of baby-pins and showed Mary Faith a dozen snapshots that her ranchman had sent to her from Arizona—pictures of pepper trees on a wide street in Phoenix, of the camel-back mountains and several views of a big ranch house with wide shady porches.

"That's where little Jeanie is going to live one of these days," she said as she took them back from Mary Faith. "I'm in love for the first time in my life, and isn't it just my luck to fall for a farmer? That's what a rancher really is, Mary Faith. Can you imagine me living out there in the middle of a thousand acres with nothing to do all day but watch alfalfa grow?"

"You can look at the palm trees and the camel-back mountains," said Mary Faith gravely. "And you'll have your husband —that is, if you really intend to marry this man. I'd live on a ranch with Kim for the next 20 years, without seeing anybody else, if I had to, and enjoy it."

Jean gazed at her, and both puzzlement and awe were in her face. "You are still crazy about that wet smack you're married to, aren't you?" she asked. "Why you ever picked him in the first place is miles beyond me. You could have had 'most anybody. Whatever it takes to catch a husband, you've got it, Mary Faith. Looks and brains and a grand disposition—and if you don't divorce Kim Farrell after this baby arrives I'm going to stop seeing you. I'm disgusted with you, as it is."

And with that she kissed Mary Faith with great affection and went on her way to deliver the rest of her Christmas packages.

Synopsis

Mary Faith, secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy businessman, gives up her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, shiftless young lawyer. She realizes he has an eye for every girl, but hopes that married life will sober him and make him successful in his profession. Instead, Kim is annoyed at Mary Faith's "Puritanism," and his friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, find her a dull companion. Learning that she is to become a mother, Mary Faith, for the first time, visits Kim's office. Kim is furious when Mary Faith finds him flirting with his blonde secretary. That night he informs his mother and Mary Faith that he is leaving. Heartbroken, Mary Faith decides not to tell him of her approaching motherhood. She gets a temporary job as a stenographer. After a few weeks Kim stops in at home, surprised that the two women are getting along all right.

Now Go On

"You talk as if I were your enemy," said Mary Faith.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Today was the day!

Yes sir, boys and girls, today, inaugurated the first of the big time vaudeville shows which the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club members have witnessed at their regular meetings.

Announcement of these shows were made at the meetings last Saturday and also several times during the week, in these columns, consequently the attendance at the meeting today at the Rowland, Sheridan Square, Manor, Plaza Arsenal, Etna-Harris, Cameraphone, Belmar and Schenley theaters, were the largest since the club was organized, more than a year ago.

The members who attended the Rowland, Manor and Sheridan Square were entertained by the Rhythm Sisters—Billinger and Miller—in a character change and dancing duo. Anna Mae Johnson, clever little acrobat and Frankie Porter, Pittsburgh's famous boy soprano who also acted as master of ceremonies.

ENTERTAIN CLUBS

At the Cameraphone, Belmar and Schenley, Freddy Kelly, the boy who dances on roller skates, and very good, too, acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the following acts: The Evans Sisters, harmony singers and dancers; Jane Neff, popular little ballad singer and acrobat. Each act received a generous round of applause.

Prof. Maier's "Punch and Judy" show, the oldest form of entertainment in the world, brought cheers from the members of the Arsenal, Plaza and Etna-Harris. For most of the younesters of these theaters it was the first "Punch and Judy" show they had ever seen. When Punch, that funny little fellow with the large hooked nose, quarrels with his wife, Judy, the various disorderly and tragical things he does in a ludicrous way brought additional bursts of laughter from the members. Most of them were still laughing at his antics after the act had left the stage.

Taking it all in all it was a great day and one that will be long remembered in the minds of the "kiddies."

NEW UNITS

Josh Dreano, who built the units which appeared today and which will appear at the other theaters in this particular group of Junior Komic Club meeting places on January 14 and 21, has already started work on assembling three new units which will make their appearance on January 28.

The list of theaters where the three units mentioned above are to appear next Saturday will be found in the Junior Komic Club news of tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed to you free.

Bugs Baer

The Bug Who Goes Jig-Saw Bugs

Our family has gone jig-saw nuts.

The first mug we ever saw doing a jigger was Gilbert Seldes. We thought, "Poor guy. He's like all the king's hosses and all the king's men working on the blueprints of Humpty Dumpty."

But we watched him and finally got the fever. Now, we figure out jig-saws containing 700 pieces. We're official hunk finder for quarry explosions.

The cook, the wife and the baby all help to unscramble irritating splinters. The governess and the butler are on the advisory board. Just yesterday, the wife slapped the cook with a wet flounder because the chief fried a piece of George Washington's ear with the hamburger steak.

It tasted all right. But it didn't fit.

If you ever see The Bug dashing for the river with the northeast corner of Napoleon's hat in his hand you will know that the old boy has decided to join that famous conqueror.

Last week a business man walked into the Irving Trust Company, slapped a chunk of Queen Elizabeth's left leg on the table and hollered:

"How much will you lend me on that?"

The president of the bank looked it over and said:

"Well, it might have been pretty good collateral once. But it ain't worth much now."

But he took it home with him anyway. He had a hunk missing from Cromwell interviewing the cavalier in the Blue Boar Inn.

Yessir, and notwithstanding, those jig-saws get you and get you plentiful. If you ain't crazy now, at least you are in the line that always forms on the left. They'll get to your name in the morning.

We can't look at anything that is all in one piece. When you go jig-saw you have to break all your plates and saucers, knock over the floor lamps and throw flatirons through your own windows.

Aliens' Pauper Labor and Cheap Money Impoverishing U. S. Industries

LET US subject the SOUNDNESS of the "Buy American" movement to the most rigorous of tests—a mathematical test.

A proposition in mathematics is often verified by working it backwards, as well as forwards.

From the American standpoint, the effect on our labor and industry of the unchecked influx of foreign goods from depreciated currency and low wage-scale countries, like Japan, is seen in the paralysis of many lines of our domestic trade, the spread of unemployment, and the deepening and emphasis of the depression.

* * *

JAPAN, with a currency that has depreciated sixty per cent, and a factory wage that averages seven cents an hour, is experiencing a BOOM.

A dispatch this week from Tokio tells us that "THANKS TO CURRENCY DEPRECIATION, EXPORTS OF ALMOST EVERY LINE ARE EXPANDING."

For the year just closed, the exports of the Empire show a great increase over last year, and the unfavorable trade balance, to which Japan is accustomed, is virtually wiped out.

To what are these happy results due, which in the language of the Tokio correspondent, have "given the Japanese people reason to relax and enjoy the festive season?"

THE Finance Minister of Japan is at no loss to find an explanation. They are due to two things—the DEPRECIATED CURRENCY and CHEAP LABOR of Japan.

Cheap prices are extending Japan's foreign markets, he maintains. They are reducing unemployment, increasing manufacturing skill and consolidating the foundations of Japan's manufacturing industries.

"The Japanese people," he continues, "are WAGING AN ECONOMIC WAR, WITH THEIR LABOR AS THEIR CHIEF WEAPON, against America and France which are fighting with gold.

"THIS WAR has been turning out favorably for Japan, and the joint efforts of the people and their government are beginning to bear fruit."

* * *

THIS is the reverse side of the picture as it is seen in the United States.

Here we have whole industries destroyed as in the case of miniature electric lights; employes by the thousand thrown out of work; and the country flooded with Japanese electric light bulbs and flashlights, inferior in quality and so closely imitating our standard article that the purchaser is readily deceived.

Japan is perhaps more frank than other depreciated currency countries in stating, through an officer of her government, that she is waging economic "war" against us, but she is not alone.

Forty other countries are exploiting their cheap currencies or their low-paid labor, or both, to the same end. England, France, Belgium, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia—to mention only some—ARE ROLLICKING IN THE CLOVER OF OUR UNDEFENDED HOME MARKET, AND POKING DERISION AND CONTEMPT AT OUR TARIFF.

* * *

THE list of commodities and manufactured articles, in which the American producer has been forced out of his own market, is practically co-extensive with American consumer wants.

As the customs authorities point out, it includes butter and other farm products; shoes, chinaware, electric light bulbs, canned fish and canned vegetables, fresh fruits, toothbrushes, silverware, iron and steel, coal, cement, brick, lumber and other forest products; automobile tires, leather gloves and other leather goods; tools, cutlery, linens, laces, porcelain, jewelry, chemicals, silk goods, rugs, toys, cotton goods, rubber boots and other rubber products; buttons, and scores of other items.

* * *

WITH such facts staring the people in the face, it would not have seemed strange for Congress to have foregone its usual holiday recess.

CORRECTION, INSTANT AND SWEEPING, OF THE INTOLERABLE PASS INTO WHICH OUR AFFAIRS HAVE SUNK, MUST BE ITS FIRST ACTION.

Meantime the people, unaided, have taken the matter in hand.

The "Buy American" movement gains strength hourly.

Our people, when stirred, are powerful, and alone they can do much.

BUT CONGRESS MUST BACK THEM UP!

Rural Opposition

Country Legislators, Opposing Blue Law Repeal, Misrepresent Their Constituents.

The battle in the Legislature next week over the question of repealing the Blue Law will be between the cities and the country districts, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Harrisburg. Rural legislators are reported to be against a change. If that is the case, they will be misrepresenting their constituents, for country people as well as the urban population would like to be able to attend movies and baseball games, and to fish and hunt on Sunday.

The opinion that the rural residents of Pennsyl- vania would like relief from the narrow-minded restrictions on innocent amusements on Sunday is based on a post-card poll taken by the Sun-Telegraph. The farmers and other country folk of Allegheny County, who are of the same character as the other rural dwellers of Pennsylvania, voted for repeal of the Blue Law.

An encouraging message comes from Senator Frank J. Harris. Prospects are brighter than at other recent sessions for improvements in the election laws to prevent fraud. The opposition of Senator James J. Coyne and his henchmen to remedial legislation, as expressed at the Republican caucus of the Allegheny County delegation, has produced a reaction in favor of such legislation.

David B. Roberts, a former employe of the county, has a just grievance against the County Commissioners. He was indicted on an election fraud charge, and the Commissioners suspended him from office pending the outcome of the case. But although the jury found him not guilty and placed the costs of the trial on the county, and although the Commissioners have admitted his service was satisfactory, they have not lifted the suspension nor acted otherwise on the case. Roberts is not receiving a square deal.

Pittsburgh Council of the Foreign Policy Associa- tion, of which Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, is chairman, is contributing much to Pittsburghers' understanding of world affairs through its discussion meetings at which differing points of view are always presented. The Hungry Club of Pittsburgh gained national fame by listening impartially to all sides of important public controversies.

The Foreign Policy Association makes the in- teresting announcement that at its meeting at the Hotel Schenley next Friday evening there will be a symposium on Russia, with addresses by Boris E. Skvirsky, director of the Soviet Information Bureau at Washington, and Sherwood Eddy, a non-Communist writer and lecturer. This discussion should be of more than ordinary value.

The Taxpayers' Co-operative League of Tarentum has set a good example for other civic bodies in Allegheny County by petitioning the Legislature to reduce the salaries of county officials. There are 37 who receive $10,000 a year and more. Their purchasing power is much greater now than when the Legislature fixed the salaries because of the drop in the cost of living.

Those Perry High School students who have built a six-inch reflecting telescope under the direction of Leo J. Scanlon, of the astronomical section of the Academy of Science and Art, are equipping themselves for many pleasant hours on starry evenings. Learning to recognize the constellations, the planets and the other heavenly bodies, they will find something of interest every clear night.

This is a good time to begin the study of astron- omy, for the heavens at this season are especially interesting. Orion and the Pleiades are to be seen, and the great nebula in Andromeda. Those who postpone their bedtime until midnight can see Mars and Jupiter rise, and if they will get up in the morning about an hour before sunrise they can see Venus. A lifetime of satisfaction is in store for those who become acquainted with the stars while young.

"I can stand the depression, but I can't stand the depressionists," said a Pittsburgh businessman yesterday. The remark was prompted by the annoyance he suffers from the whining pessimism of an acquaintance who daily dins a tale of woe into his unwilling ears. It would be better for all to refrain from useless gloomy talk.

The new East Liberty Presbyterian Church will be a gem of ecclesiastical architecture. All Pittsburgh will be proud of it. Have you observed the present stage of the construction? An eight-column picture, showing the progress that has been made, will appear in the Gravure Section of tomorrow's issue of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

"Dance of the Virgins," an enthralling new serial, starts tomorrow in the American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Among other interesting things this magazine also contains an important article on taxation. Did you know that if there were no taxes, everybody could take four months' vacation every year and have just as much money as at present?

It's Time He Bought American!

His hat was made on England's shore,
His socks were knit in France;
The bonnie braes of Scotland bore
His coat and vest and pants.
His lamp, his table and his chair
Were built across the seas.
The Stars and Stripes he flaunts in air
Were made by Japanese.

He lights a pipe of British type
And puffs a London smoke.
He buys a lot of foreign tripe
While workmen here are broke.
He scatters wealth in every mart
From Sweden to Japan,
And it is time he had a heart
And BOUGHT AMERICAN.

Barney Gallant's sudden, overnight decision to close his cafe, in Greenwich Village, leaves a void not only among the unwashed below Washington Square but among the uptown sun-dodgers who often waffled there at dawn. The only remaining haunt of old days is Madam Bartilotti's, who has gone back to Barney's place, her original stand. If prohibition ends, Barney intends to open up again, but uptown in the Columbus Circle neighborhood. Otherwise he will join the dilettante discontents of Broadway along the Riviera.

Incidentally, a returning friend tells me of running across Jimmy Walker abroad. The former Mayor's attitude is so completely changed, one would scarcely recognize the debonair Jimmy of old. He sits quietly and his talk is in subdued monotone as though a tumbling world left him stunned. His handshake was limp and his boreal aurora expression has dulled to intense melancholy. * * *

Paris has many expatriates from America—men and women who have fled from scandal, love jilts or various causes. They are always to be found where countrymen gather, the Ritz Bar, Harry's or the American Express. They seem eternally seeking crumbs of gossip of their own land. In obviously feigned bravado they declare they will never return, but I have never left Gare St. Lazar in a boat train that there's not a group at the lower end of the platform gazing wistfully until the thundering train diminuendoed to a dot on Normandy's horizon.

The Friars in bankruptcy, and the Lambs fighting valiantly to weather the storm, have shorn entrances of the always animated groups found there in the late afternoon and evening. In front of each bubbled a fount of good cheer and some of the choicest stories of the day decantered from these chancy gatherings. The difficulty has been that much of the memberships work in Hollywood. And like so many who pull up stakes—forget. * * *

Young Pat Rooney, in a bright wet-green suit, and carrying a bag of golf clubs, swung across West Forty-seventh street. Frisco stopped him with: "You going to p-p-play pool or golf?"

The ex-Kaiser's grandson, Prince Louis, has been a constant companion of Leon Gordon, the artist for whom he has been sitting for a portrait. He is a personable youth who enjoys an American razzing. Gordon looked up from the easel the other day to remark: "You know you came from a terrible family." And with a disarming wink, the prince chirped: "I'm trying to live up to it, too, sucker!" * * *

Isn't It So?

It's easy to satisfy a self-satisfied person.

There are 10 cures for every disease—but they rarely work.

The friendliness of a woman is sometimes won through flattery.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

A desperate woman said to me: "How can I bear my life?"

"What have I to live for?" she said. And there was terror and anger in her eyes. "I'm getting old. See my gray hair? I'll be 46 next March. No one notices me any more. Nothing exciting ever happens to me any more. My life's as dull and meaningless as an empty room.

"My husband doesn't love me any more, either. That's been coming on for a long time. It hurt terribly once; but I don't care now. My family and I have drifted apart. The few friends I have are all so blue, it's no use talking to them. And my little girl Betty died 10 years ago. Yet they tell me to cheer up!

"But what's the use. What have I to live for?"

What have you to live for?
You have life to live for.
"But life's a mess!" you cry.
No, it isn't!

YOUR life—your small, personal program—may be a mess. And as long as you live within the limits of that small, personal program, everything may seem a mess. But everything isn't a mess. Life isn't a mess.

Life is endlessly beautiful and exciting, mysterious and compelling. There's no end to life—no limit to the things it can do. It answers any question. It heals any hurt. It fills any lack. It restores any loss.

There's everything in Life that you need.

There's unlimited Youth for you to share, to replace the little, limited span of Youth you've lost. There's Love, to revive and replace the love that's slipping. There's Adventure enough to charm away every dull moment, and Gallantry to sweeten every disillusionment. And there are ten million little children to take the place of one little dead child.

There's all that in Life. There's all that to live for. But that's the trouble. You haven't been interested in living Life.

Why have you been bored, discouraged? Because you have been trying to live within your own tiny, tiresome experience.

Once there was a man, poorer than you are, living in times more desperately cruel. What did he have to live for? Very little, according to the notion of the world. He had no home, no wealth, no wife or child. Poverty, obscurity—they had been his lot since birth. There were traitors amongst his friends, and he knew it. And death, with appalling torture, lay just ahead.

Could a man's lot have been worse? Hardly. Yet he saw much to live for. Indeed, he saw so much beauty and nobility in life that he was willing to die, that it might come to pass. He did die. But before he died, he left as his greatest gift to men the secret of a large life.

"WHOSOEVER WILL SAVE HIS LIFE SHALL LOSE IT: BUT WHOSOEVER WILL LOSE HIS LIFE—THE SAME SHALL SAVE IT."

How can you bear your life? How shall you save it from ruin; how restore its joy and eagerness? There, in that verse, lies the answer.

Yes, I know; the world's a dreary place to live in now. There are things that will hurt and depress you—things that will humiliate you, anger you, cost you plenty. And you're afraid you'll not find there the safety you knew at 6, or the thrill you knew at 16, or the personal pride and pleasure you knew at 26. Of course you won't. But what of it? You'll find something infinitely greater.

YOU'LL FIND LIFE—MAN-SIZED LIFE—WITH A BIG PARADE SWEEPING THROUGH THE SPOTLIGHT.

THEN GET OUT! AND GET GOING! YOU'RE A BIG CHILD NOW. ACT YOUR AGE.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

What 'Ladies Prefer'

"What kind of men do women prefer?

* * *

This startling question comes from a modest masculine correspondent—and quite takes my breath away. I thought that the whole world—particularly the feminine world—was concentrating all its mind and energy on trying to discover what sort of women the men prefer. If any!

* * *

But, since there are some men modest enough to be interested in knowing what women really prefer about men, I'll start right off by saying that ALL women like a MODEST man! The kind who does not try to grab the center of the stage and turn the limelight on himself. The kind who is willing to "star" the woman. A conceited man or an egotist must be either a hero or an Adonis to get by with the modern woman.

* * *

Women like quiet, reserved men. Not the glum, gloomy, morose or cynical kind. But even the cynic is preferable to the loud-speaker, the wise-cracker, the marathon-talker or the "life-of-the-party" boy. No woman can feel any real romance for a clown.

* * *

Women like a masterful man. Not a bully or a caveman or a roughneck; but a man who knows his own mind and does not let any woman bully him. There is nothing, before which the feminine heart crumples so quickly, as masculine strength—mental, physical or moral.

* * *

Yet, women like a GENTLEman. Not necessarily one who goes in for silk hats and a high polish and always uses the right spoon; but one who knows how to be tender and thoughtful and protecting. Even the most independent woman likes to be "Little-girled." Many a selfish weakling has won out over a better man because he knew how to make the graceful gesture at the psychological moment.

* * *

* * *

Women want a man who appeals to the imagination; whom they can visualize in the role of the hero of their favorite novel, or a great lover—a man whom they can idealize and dramatize!

* * *

Women like a man who can talk about something interesting, besides himself; and whose vocabulary consists of more than three scintillating remarks — "Yeah?" "Izzat so?" and "Be good to me, Sweetie."

* * *

Women admire a capable man; one who knows how to do things—how to run an office, drive a car, order a dinner, handle a situation, meet an emergency or get out of a jam. Success adds much to a man's charm for women, simply because it proves that he is capable.

* * *

You SEE how it is. The very qualities that women value and admire most in a man are those which men admire least in a woman.

* * *

But what does it matter which kind of men "ladies prefer"—theoretically? They'll keep right on idealizing one type and marrying the other type—just as men have done, from the beginning of time.
